House Votes Relief Fund; Earmarkings Stricken Out

Roosevelt Agrees To Wide Spending

Roll Calls Are Decisive; Hopkins' $2,000 Pay Cut Dropped.

By Robert C. Albright.

The House "earmarking rebellion" tottered to a weary close last night, with a sweeping Administration victory on the President's $1,500,000,000 relief bill.

Worn down by nearly 12 hours of gruelling session, the Democratic uprising on PWA, flood control and roads allotments completely collapsed on the rocks of Administration compromise at the first night meeting of the term.

Lining up on the showdown behind their leaders, members toed the Administration mark by throwing out of the bill $505,000,000 in specific earmarkings they had boisterously voted into it last week.

Restore Hopkins' Pay.

In a last gesture of magnanimity toward WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins, target of last week's outbreak of resentment, members restored the $2,000 salary cut previously voted. By a 272 to 96 roll call ballot.

The Administration polished off its counter-offensive by crushing a Republican motion to return relief administration to the States. The minority move to recommit the bill was defeated 78 to 296.

Then the House placed its final stamp of approval on the $1,500,000,000 recaptured for Hopkins, by passing the bill, 323 to 44. Adjournment came at 11:45 p. m.

(It was an exhausted and repentant membership that plodded its way homeward at midnight. The leadership had taken no chances on quitting in the middle of the fight, when it was winning. It had tried that before and lived to regret it.

Only the House highway bloc, dissatisfied with the compromise terms held out by the President, put up a fight. But on the roll call finale, the $150,000,000 highway earmarking was defeated, 167 to 207.

Insurance Veto Overridden.

The President's House victory on relief was offset earlier in the day by an overwhelming House and Senate overrider of a White House veto of a veterans' insurance measure. The House, 368 to 13, and the Senate, 69 to 12, overrode Mr. Roosevelt's "no" on five-year extension of time for more than 20,000 World War veterans to renew their war risk insurance.

Bedraggled members, the spirit of revolt pounded out of them, received this year's first taste of a night session and didn't like it. But the spectators in the gallery did. The Capitol was thronged with the curious, attracted by the dome beacon light that signaled Congress was working late.

Some members went dinnerless. Others crunched doughnuts or sandwiches in the cloakroom, or fought for coffee in the House restaurant.

A ruling by the Speaker spared members an even longer session. Representative John Taber, New York Republican demanded full reading of the "engrossed" bill before passage. Bankhead said his motion came too late.

Death of the House earmarking drive followed four days of negotiations by Majority Leader Sam Rayburn between President Roosevelt and the three rebellious House blocs. Terms acceptable to the PWA and flood control factions were finally managed, but the roads bloc remained unassuaged.

Yesterday morning Representative Wilburn Cartwright, of Oklahoma, leader of the highway movement, put the question to the House Public Roads Committee. It was divided, 7 to 7. So Cartwright determined to fight it out.

Cartwright Sticks to Guns.

"I don't march up the hill one day and down the next," he informed the House.

Reversal of the three separate earmarkings followed a plea to the House by Reyburn, and his promise not only that PWA "moral obligations" would be fulfilled by the Government, but that all available relief labor in flood sections will be put to work on control work.

By a count of 271 to 107, the House voted the full $1,500,000,000 asked by the President and WPA Administrator Hopkins.

The first of the earmarking amendments—$45,000,000 for flood control

Cordon to Block Threat of New March; Reds Seen Behind Riot.

On the Labor Front.

Almost 1,000 policemen were mobilized near Republic Steel's South Chicago plant after reports strikers were planning another march on the mill, still in operation.

In Washington, John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chairman, charged Sunday's bloody riot at the plant was "planned murder." He listed the death toll at six. Republic officials angrily denied his charges.

At Detroit, the prosecutor subpenaed Dearborn city officials to testify after he said "impartial testimony" disclosed "unprovoked assault" by Ford employes upon demonstrators at a recent riot near the automobile plant.

Republic plants at Warren and Canton, Ohio, and at Buffalo, N. Y., were picketed.

United Automobile Workers started a "rent strike" at Pontiac, Mich., and claimed 48 families already had refused to pay increases.

Tom M. Girdler, chairman of Republic, told a press conference in Cleveland that his plant contained arms and ammunition. He said the company would never sign such a contract as that demanded by the C. I. O.

Police Mobilized.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 1.—Chief John Prendergast of the uniformed police—declaring a "state of emergency" existed—mobilized a huge force of officers today to guard the Republic Steel Corporation's South Chicago property.

He assigned six companies, totaling 948 men, to the scene of the most sanguinary struggle of the widespread steel strike after the Hyde Park Police Station reported receipt of anonymous information demonstrators planned a new march on the mill.

The picket line in that trouble zone where six men lost their lives and more than 100 were injured in Sunday's battle lengthened hourly.

Prendergast ordered two companies, each comprising 144 policemen, 9 sergeants, 4 lieutenants and a captain, detailed to the plant on each eight-hour shift.

While he placed the patrolmen on a semimilitary basis, Coroner Frank Walsh opened an inquest in an effort to fix the responsibility for the deaths.

A witness in the guarded morgue chamber, Mrs. Joseph Rothmund, widow of one of the victims, testified her husband was a Communist. She stated he was once a baker and had been a WPA worker but had never been employed by a steel firm.

Previously, Capt. James L. Mooney who supervised the force of officers who dispersed the demonstrators in the battle, said he had information that known Communists fomented the disorder.

The inquest was continued to June 15 after relatives of two slain steel workers, Earl Handley and Alfred Causey, both employed by the Inland Steel Co., gave brief testimony.

Body Found Floating in Bay, Weighted With Satchel.

By Edward T. Folliard
A Staff Correspondent.

The bullet entered his throat and plowed through his brain.

The two physicians who performed the autopsy—Dr. R. R. Norris and Dr. George C. Coulbourne—agreed that death must have been instantaneous.

Evidence Doubted.

That would seem to clear up the mystery that has surrounded the case since Keene disappeared from a Norfolk and Washington steamboat three weeks ago as the vessel was moving from the Potomac River into Chesapeake Bay.

Tonight, however, the authorities here at Crisfield were not at all sure whether they were confronted with a murder or suicide. Earlier in the day, a coroner's jury on Smith's Island had called it murder, but the view here was that this jury had no evidence aside from the body itself.

State's Attorney F. Kirk Maddrix, of Somerset County, said there were a number of questions he wanted answered before he could conclude whether it was murder or suicide.

Bullets in Pocket.

Keene's body was found Monday afternoon floating in Chesapeake Bay, 15 miles from here, by Capt. Edward Smith of Smith's Island, skipper of a fishing boat. He took it to Smith's Island and today it was brought here to Crisfield.

The body was floating feet up, the head being weighed down with a junk-loaded briefcase.

The complete list of articles found in the brief case tied with a rope to Keene's neck included the real estate section of The Washington Post of January 31, a handkerchief, a collar button, a rusty nail file, a fragment of a pocket comb, an iron for removin tires, a mechanic's hammer, an automobile jack listed to a Michigan firm at St. Joseph, two rusty beer can openers, a pearl-handled knife, a silver tea strainer, a paper folder of matches and a silver mesh bag containing Keene's key ring.

Fair weather, with slightly lower temperature, is forecast for today. The thermometer stood at 92 at 4:30 p. m. yesterday, having risen from a low of 68 that morning.

The only reported heat victim was Roy Hart, 39, 819 Eleventh street northwest, who was prostrated while painting a house in Bethesda, Md.

Hart was brought to the Workmen's Compensation Clinic and returned home.

D.C. Real Estate Tax Rise Asked By Mrs. Norton

Rate 'Unjustifiably' Low, She Says; Prefers Sales to Income Levy.

By James D. Secrest.

A 20-cent increase in the District realty tax rate was suggested yesterday by Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, as the Kennedy subcommittee prepared to draft its revenue program for submission tomorrow.

A 20-cent jump in the realty and personal property rate would produce approximately $2,400,000 and would return the rate to $1.70, where it was three years ago.

Mrs. Norton said she would prefer a local sales tax rather than an income tax.

Says Tax Is Too Low.

The District Committee chairman, whose statement foreshadowed an intracommittee scrap when the subcommittee meets with the full committee tomorrow, expressed the belief the local realty tax is "too low and can't be justified."

As the realty tax rate is fixed by the Commissioners, the District Committee could effect an increase only by failing to report enough tax measures to meet the anticipated deficit of between $6,000,000 and $8,000,000.

Opposition to the latest proposal of the District heads to place the $1,500,000 motor vehicle weight tax in a highway fund rather than in the general revenue also was indicated by Mrs. Norton.

New Road Fund.

Under a bill submitted yesterday by the Commissioners the motor vehicle levy revenue, together with about $325,000 in fees from operators' permits, registration fees, and title transfers, as well as $2,600,000 in gasoline taxes, would go into a new highway fund.

Offsetting this loss to the general revenue would be the transfer of the maintenance cost of the department of vehicles and traffic at $200,000 and the salaries and equipment of traffic policemen at $500,000 to the highway fund.

While these two accounts then The income and business privi- general reveinue would suffer a loss of about $1,300,000.

The transfer was necessitated, according to the Commissioners, by the rejection of a 1-cent increase in the gasoline tax by the Kennedy sub-committee.

When the House sub-committee meets again today, it will consider eliminating the retroactive provision of the income tax bill submitted yesterday and decide whether payments on the intangible personal property tax shall be credited on the income assessments.

The District heads told the subcommittee they would like to see the retroactive income tax provision eliminated.

In the Senate no voice of dissent broke into the general chorus of approval accorded the President's message and Secretary Morgenthau's detailed revelation.

3-Nation Move Reported to 'Peg' World Gold Price

By the United Press.

London, June 1.—The United States, Great Britain and France are preparing a joint statement guaranteeing a world price for gold at the present rate, it was reported tonight in informed financial circles.

The reported tri-partite agreement was received enthusiastically in London's financial district where more than $20,000,000 worth of gold has come from hoarding and been sold during the last three days because of fears the United States gold price may be lowered.

The tri-partite guarantee of a stabilized price, it was said, would carry the support of Holland, Switzerland and Belgium which indorsed the Franco-British-United States monetary accord of a year ago.

Tax-Dodging Expose Aim Of Congress

By Sidney Olson.

Congress, responding to a hot-worded message from President Roosevelt, prepared last night to focus the spotlight of publicity on wealthy tax-dodgers who have been "mulcting the Treasury of the Government's just due," and thus "shifting the tax load to the shoulders of others less able to pay."

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, the majority leader, told reporters last night he expected to see "within 30 days" a bill to plug the major gaps in the present tax laws—gaps through which Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury, claimed yesterday millions of dollars of revenue has escaped tax collectors.

The Senate, acting within two hours of receiving the President's message, passed the resolution of Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, chairman of the Finance Committee, which authorized establishment of a joint Congressional committee to investigate tax evasion in the Nation.

12-Man Investigation.

The Harrison resolution, as amended by Senator George W. Norris (Independent Republican), Nebraska, and passed, provides that six members of the Senate Finance Committee and six members of the House Ways and Means Committee shall be appointed to make the inquiry.

This committee is to report to the next session of Congress, by February 1, 1938. However, in response to numerous demands on the floor for immediate loophole-plugging legislation, Harrison pledged that a bill to patch up the major leaks will be reported out as soon as possible.

The President's vigorous demand on Congress was based particularly on the moral issue. He said: "In this immediate problem the decency of American morals is involved."

Asserting "successful tax dodging by a minority of very rich individuals breeds efforts by other people to dodge other laws," the President drove with especial emphasis at certain "lawyers of high standing at the bar" and "certain newspaper publishers."

Accuses Publishers.

The publishers, he asserted, are already making "efforts to befog this issue."

"In other words, not one but many red herrings are in preparation."

The proceedings of the investigating committee, when established, are expected to provide one of the most sensational hearings in all the long series of Washington investigations.

Guesses as to identity of the numerous instances of wealty tax-dodgers cited by Secretary Morgenthau in the letter which the President incorporated in his message were heard everywhere yesterday, with many prominent millionaires figuring in the surmises.

Byrd Assails Inequality.

Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, often a New Deal opponent, called the message "a timely reminder," in a statement insisting that "we shall never have tax equality so long as we have tax exempt bonds and so long as there are Government employes whose salaries are exempt from taxation.

Byrd introduced yesterday a bill to tax tax-exempt bonds and to tax tax-free officeholders and employes.

Treasury officials said they hoped to collect more than $100,000,000 in taxes by prosecuting evaders and plugging gaps. This money would come next year.

Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, said in his view many tax-dodgers now would be more than willing to re-file their last March 15 tax returns.

The President stressed his view that no new tax legislation would be necessary this year, and that the immediate leak-plugging job before the Congress should be differentiated from a long-term re-examination of the tax structure of the country.

Selassie Finds Repose in Garden

Exiled Selassie Closely Follows Crisis in Spain

By Clyde H. DuBose,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

"The Emperor!"

From behind a vase of flowers on the gilded center table there arose from a settee a frail, sad-looking man with flowing black hair and black beard that matched his black cape and trousers: His Majesty, Emperor Haile Selassie, once proud king of kings of Ethiopia and conquering lion of Judah, reduced to exile and now passing his days in "watchful waiting" in this historic little city of southern Britain.

His majesty bowed, murmured a few words of strange origin, and extended long, delicate fingers. Then he motioned the writer to a chair at his left. The attendant remained standing. The high-ceilinged room was like a tomb. The whole house was deathly still. From the gardens beyond the dormer windows there was not even the twitter of a bird. An air of profound sadness prevailed. It was a house under the spell of death!

Commends America.

Then His Majesty spoke. There was something he wished The Washington Post to say. He had granted The Post a special interview here in Fairfield, his palatial mansion of Georgian architecture, situated at the corner of Old Bridge and New Bridge roads on the outskirts of Bath.

"To the people of Washington, as well as to the American people, I express my profound gratitude for the attitude of conscious sympathy with which they have honored the just cause of the Ethiopian people. The United States of America, which has banished the words 'aggression,' 'annexation,' 'conquest,' or 'domination'

Nye Neutrality Proposal Wins Consideration

By William V. Nessly.

With official and diplomatic circles seeking a solution for the new crisis in the Spanish civil war, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today will consider the Nye resolution, designed to pave the way for listing of Germany and Italy as belligerents under the neutrality act.

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, will appear before the committee to press his resolution, which calls on the Secretary of State to advise the Senate whether the present act is sufficient to provide for an embargo on war materials and financial aid against nations whose armed forces are active in a state in which civil war exists.

This disclosure was one of a swiftly moving series of developments centering about Sunday's bombardment of Almeria, Spain, by German warships:

Secretary of State Hull urged upon the German and Spanish ambassadors, in separate talks, the peaceable settlement of their differences, thereby taking the first step by this Government to prevent spread of the Spanish conflict to other lands.

In addition to the Nye resolution, there was introduced by Representative Jerry J. O'Connell (Democrat), of Montana, a House resolution requesting the President to proclaim Italy and Germany nations at war, as defined by the neutrality act, and to invoke the embargoes provided by the act.

The United States decided not to move its embassy from besieged Valencia, Spain, but announced arrangements by which the embassy staff will live outside the city, to lessen danger of personal injury.

Italy Acts to Tighten Blockade; Reprisals Threatened.

Germany Demands Patrol Use Force

Punitive Expedition Is Proposed in Rome Newspaper.

The Spanish Crisis.

Russian ships carrying Loyalist supplies will be halted henceforth by Italian warships, it was reported in Rome.

London sources intimated Germany demanded the use of force to prevent Spanish intervention by sea. Some authorities believed Germany and Italy would return to the neutrality committee if such a provision were made.

Germany threatened to sever diplomatic ties with the Vatican because of Cardinal Mundelein's speech assailing Hitler.

The British Ambassador to Berlin declared his country to be a firm friend of Germany "if she would keep the peace in Europe."

Secretary of State Hull said he had urged Germany and Spain to keep the peace, in pleas to Ambassadors of those countries here.

Senator Nye said he will appear before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today to ask action on his resolution paving the way for listing Germany and Italy as belligerents under the neutrality act.

Soviet Aid Assailed.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, June 1.—Italian warships, a highly informed source said tonight, are under orders to halt at sea Russian ships carrying supplies to the Madrid-Valencia government.

There were warnings also that Italy will force quick reprisals if any of her warships are molested by the Spanish government fighting craft.

The Spanish situation developed so rapidly that Premier Mussolini, himself at the controls of his trimotored plane, flew back from the country to take direct control.

Italy withdrew yesterday from the European neutrality committee because of an attack on one of her warships, and in sympathy with Germany which lost 26 sailors under bombardment of Spanish government planes attacking the Nazi battleship Deutschland.

Both nations also withdrew their battleships from the neutrality committee's naval patrol, designed to prevent armed shipments to either side in the Spanish civil war.

That withdrawal, a reliable spokesman said, would make it "too easy" for the Spanish government forces to get aid, and work hardship on Insurgent Gen. Franco, recognized by Italy as true head of Spain.

Therefore, he continued, Italy herself will seek to prevent aid to the Madrid-Valencia regime which she regards as Communist and in close touch with Russia, by stopping Soviet ships.

Suggestions of the newspaper Il Piccolo that a punitive expedition be sent against the Spanish government were "certainly an expression of the Italian public's indignation over the Deutschland and Barletta incidents," an informed source declared.

Portugal May Withdraw.

Lisbon (Wednesday), June 2 (U.P.). Portugal indicated today that she may withdraw from the Spanish non-intervention committee and join Germany and Italy in dealing with the Spanish situation.

The government published a note sent to the British Foreign Office and the non-intervention committee in London "protesting against the acts of which ships in service of the committee (meaning Italian and German) were the victims."

Patrol May Use Force.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 1.—The return of Germany and Italy to Europe's 27-nation neutrality committee tonight appeared to hinge upon the committee's decision whether to use force against Spain in preventing interference with neutral shipping.

France and Britain suggested safety zones for neutral shipping.

Germany, however, wanted the further step, informed sources said—use of force by the neutrality committee's naval patrol.

There were some who believed creation of a sort of international navy to guarantee that Spain will keep the peace at sea might be devised.

Earhart Airplane Reaches San Juan On World Journey

The slim aviatrix, accompanied by her navigator, Capt. Fred Noonan, landed at 1:30 p. m. (Eastern standard time) at the end of an uneventful 1,033-mile hop from Miami.

She made the flight in 7 hours 33 minutes.

By the Associated Press.

Gallup, N. Mex., June 1.—Truett E Rowe, a Department of Justice agent, was slain north of here today by Guy E. Osborne, a fugitive he was attempting to arrest, and who enjoyed brief freedom until captured by officers not far from the shooting.

Chief of Police Kelsey Presley, who later captured Osborne without resistance, said he and Rowe had gone to a farmhouse to capture Osborne and that Rowe accompanied the escaped convict into a bedroom to pack his clothes. A shot sounded, Presley said, and Osborne appeared with a leveled pistol and fled.

Kelsey Presley and Leslie Mahoney, Gallup policeman, made the arrest as Osborne attempted to ride a horse past them, masquerading as a cowboy, not far from the scene of the shooting.

The capture was made while a flying squad of G-men and desert-wise Indian trackers collaborated with local officers in a three-State manhunt.

Supreme Court Quietly Ends Historic Session; Van Devanter, Justices Exchange Farewells

By Franklyn Waltman.

Bringing to an end the most historic and momentous term it has held in recent years—if not in its history—the Supreme Court yesterday adjourned after a brief session until October in an atmosphere of felicitations, free from legalistic controversy.

Van Devanter.

For the last time the 78-year-old Justice Willis Van Devanter sat with the high tribunal. His retirement becomes effective today after more than 26 years in the court. Most of the time he was on the bench yesterday he maintained a stoical countenance and gave no sign that he was departing from scenes and associates of many years' standing. Nor did he "brethren" on the bench give any sign of their regret over his departure.

This they reserved until their return to their chambers after the 45-minute session. There they joined in signing a letter to the departing dean of the tribunal, expressing their "poignant sense of regret" and wishing him "many years of continued vigor." Justice Van Devanter responded with a letter of gratitude, containing an expression of "respect and true affection for each and all of you."

Whether any of the other justices contemplate retiring in the near future under the provisions of the recently enacted Sumners-McCarran act was not indicated. It has been reported, however, that Justice George Sutherland has been considering leaving the tribunal before it reconvenes in October. Thus there will be at least one and perhaps two or three new faces on the Supreme Court bench next fall.

Having privately marked the departure of Justice Van Devanter, the members of the court proceeded to pay informal farewell calls on each other, preparatory to departure from the city later in the week for a variety of vacation spots in this country and Europe. Attaches of the court called on the justices to say good-by, and the well-groomed Charles Elmore Cropley, clerk of the court, wrote finis to the docket for the 1936-37 term after noting the business transacted yesterday.

Supreme Court Quietly Closes Historic Term

This business included the reading of two opinions deciding private litigation, orders of the court directing the re-arguing of five cases next fall, orders refusing petitions for writs of certiorari or review in a large number of cases and orders granting reviews in a smaller number. The court also appointed John S. Flannery, of the District of Columbia bar, as a special master to take evidence to determine the legal domicile of Edward H. R. Green, son of the wealthy Hetty Green, who died last June. Texas, New York, Florida and Massachusetts each claimed Green as a citizen for the purpose of assessing inheritance taxes against his estate.

The last action of the court was the admission to practice before its bar of 68 attorneys, each of whom paid $15 in return for an embossed certificate stating they were entitled to practice before the Nation's highest tribunal. The admission of these lawyers, introduced individually to the court and solemnly told that "you may pass" by Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, gave this final session the touch of a college graduation and added to its light nature.

942 Cases Finished.

Cropley's final docket tabulation showed that the court had started the term with 102 cases pending; that 950 cases were filed during the term; that 942 had been disposed of during the term, and that 110 now remain on the docket. The number of cases carried over compares with 102 at the end of the term a year ago and 109 at the end of the 1934-35 term. Except for the five cases ordered reargued, the court had decided every case argued before it and had heard all cases ready to be argued by the middle of May.

Several of the court's rulings on petitions for review affected power policies of the New Deal. Over the Government's objection, the court agreed to review litigation challenging the constitutionality of Federal financing of municipal power plants. The case at issue arose from a decision of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals refusing to enjoin the Government from financing seven municipal plants in Alabama and Iowa. The Alabama Power Co. and the Iowa City Light and Power Co. appealed that ruling.

On the other hand, the court refused a request by both the Government and the Electric Bond & Share Co. for a final determination of the 1935 public utility holding company act. The Federal District Court in Southern New York upheld the validity of the act by requiring holding companies to register with the Securities and Exchange Commission. The circuit court of appeals has not yet passed on this issue and the effort for a Supreme Court review was therefore an attempted short-cut for a final adjudication of the validity of the legislation. The case now goes to the Second Circuit Court of Appeals.

The court also refused to review a decision which requires the Tennessee Valley Authority to meet, in the Eastern Tennessee Federal Court, suits brought by 19 private utility companies challenging the right of the Federal agency to expand its power system.

Taft Wins Gold Case.

Robert A. Taft, son of the former President and Supreme Court Chief Justice, won an appeal from a ruling of the Court of Claims denying his claim for payment of $1.07 as interest on a gold-clause Liberty Bond after it was called for redemption by Treasury in advance of the maturity date.

The Court refused two pleas for reviews of cases attacking validity of the Wagner labor relations act, upheld earlier in the term, but the Court decided to hear an appeal from the conviction of Gertrude Kay, of New York, on a charge of making false claims under the Home Owners Loan act. She contends the act is unconstitutional.

Three of the five cases ordered re-argued concerned efforts of the States of Washington and West Virginia to levy occupational and other taxes on contractors engaged by the Federal Government to build dams.

Another case ordered re-argued involved the validity of a Virginia law taxing out-of-State corporations doing business in that State. The law was assailed by the Atlantic Refining Corporation, which undertook to have refunded to it a $5,000 fine paid under protest. The Virginia courts overruled the claim.

New Faces in Congress.

Forand, of Rhode Island, Left Bakery Route to Enter Politics

Representative Laughs as He Recalls Mixed Career; Lost Job as Secretary Twice, So He Ran for Office to Find Steady Work.

By Scott Hart.

The career of Aime J. Forand, of Rhode Island's First District, demonstrates the personality of Forand, and when he tells of it you have to laugh—right in the presence of Forand. But that doesn't matter, because he laughs about it, too.

Now Forand is one of those medium fat men who laugh easily. And he's extremely easy to interview, because once he was a newspaperman, and he has a way of giving you the slants.

"Politics," said Forand, flecking at a bit of dust on his white flannel trousers; "it's very easy to get into politics, but very difficult to get out. Now back in 1922 I knew nothing about politics, and I cared nothing for it. And so in this condition of mind I was a bit startled when a friend came to my house and asked if I wanted to go to the State Legislature. I jumped into the race and won out over a man who had been in the Legislature 12 years."

At the time Forand began his first venture into statesmanship, he had charge of 25 bakery wagons and a star route. He directed the affairs of state during part of the day and whooped up the bakery business in off hours. But the bakery business began, after a time, to interfere slightly with his political star and he requested the manager to assign him a shorter route.

"Now the manager was a Republican, anyhow," said Forand, "and he intimated that he didnt like the way the route was faring. So during my second term in the Legislature I sold gas and greases."

Then a friend asked him if he wouldn't like to be a newspaperman, and Forand found himself on the Providence News. "I worked there as a reporter, and sat in the Legislature, too," said Forand. "At the same time I was attending night school, but the strain got too much and the next time up I was beaten for public office. But politics was in me then. I thought I wanted to go to Washington as a Congressional secretary, so that I could get all the angles and then come back here and be a political writer. So from 1929 to 1930 I was secretary to Jeremiah E. O'Connell.

"Soon he was called back home. Then from 1930 to 1935 I was secretary to Representative Francis B. Condon. He was recalled home. It began to look as if I would have to go to Washington as a Congressman myself in order to stay there. But in the interim the money was running short and I said to myself, 'Forand, you've got to go to work.' Then I pulled on the strings and became chief of the Rhode Island State Division of Soldiers' Relief and commandant of the Rhode Island Soldiers' Home." The word "commandant" seemed to amuse the Representative.

But he reswung into the fact that he would have to run for Congress himself in order to remain in Washington. So he ran, and on November 3, 1936, the judges counted for him 73,547 votes, as against 62,095 for Charles F. Risk, his Republican opponent.

Now, in public life, Forand has arrived at, and says that he practices, some ancient truths: "Be courteous and fair, and you can win over even your enemies." And always he is remembering what his teacher, Miss Jackson, told him in the sixth grade: "In time of war, serve your country under arms; and in times of peace take an interesbt in your Government"

"I have done both," said Forand. The Congressional Directory points out that he was a sergeant, first class, in the Motor Transport Corps during the World War; that he served for 12 months overseas.

New Chain Bridge Contract Awarded To Jersey Firm

The contract for a new Chain Bridge was awarded by the District Commissioners yesterday to the Tuller Construction Co., of Red Bank, N. J. Bids for construction of the bridge were opened about ten days ago and the Tuller Company's estimate of $338,029 was found low.

Actual construction, now awaiting manufacture of the necessary steel, will begin about July 30, at which time the bridge will be closed. The new bridge will accommodate three lanes of traffic, have two pedestrian walks and be built on the present piers. The Virginia side of the bridge will be raised 11 feet from the present level.

Construction of two traffic lanes will be completed April 1, 1938, and of three lanes, May 1, 1938.

House Strikes Out Bloc Items, Votes Relief Act

Appeals of Leaders Save $1,500,000,000 Plan of Roosevelt.

and $10,000,000 for drought aid—was defeated without a record vote. Representative Joe Starnes, of Alabama, leader in the flood control fight, previously indicated satisfaction with the American compromise.

But a roll call was demanded on the proposed $300,000,000 earmarking for PWA, even though Representative Alfred F. Beiter, of New York, PWA block leader, had said he was pleased with the President's terms. By a 230 to 147 record vote, it was tossed out of the bill.

Cartwright, who alone of the three block leaders said he had not profited by White House road pledges, pressed his $150,000,000 highway earmarking to the test. On a division vote of 137 to 167 and a roll call vote of 167 to 207, this also went the route of the other.

No Specific Amounts.

The compromise successfully engineered by Rayburn promised no specific amount for any one purpose, but made substantial concessions on PWA and flood control.

The President pledged communities which have held bond elections will get PWA funds on a 45 per cent grant basis, and so-called "hazardous" schoolhouse replacement will be financed by Federal funds if communities are unable to bear the cost. He also promised to withdraw his Executive order placing relief restrictions on PWA funds.

The flood control compromise pledged that relief labor, to the extent available, will be put to work on both authorized and unauthorized flood control projects.

Republicans immediately opened a sniping attack on the White House terms.

"It seems to me," said Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell, "that the President agrees he will spend the same amount of money for the same purposes. If that is true, why does he object to Congress earmarking the money and insist upon doing it himself?"

Only a few independent amendments survived the Democratic rush to the Administration reservation.

Nepotism Clause Survives.

Outstanding among these were:

A "nepotism" amendment by Representative John R. Mitchell, of Tennessee, forbidding appointment by WPA officials of employes related to them by blood or marriage, up to the third degree.

An amendment by Representative Charles I. Faddis, of Pennsylvania, providing that WPA administrative employes in the District must be apportioned among the States, according to the last population census figures. The amendment is not retroactive.

An amendment by Representative Fritz Lanham, of Texas, denying WPA aid to relief workers who refuse to leave WPA roles to take temporary farm jobs at similar pay. They would be permitted to return to WPA when their private employment was through.

Preference on relief rolls for American citizens and World and Spanish War veterans, on amendment by Representative Hamilton Fish, New York Republican.

In sharp contrast to his hard-fought House relief victory, the President was reversed on his veterans insurance veto by both Houses in less than three hours. Mrs. Roosevelt sat unnoticed in the House gallery as Representative John Rankin, of Mississippi, led the House veterans' revolt. Senator George, of Georgia, marshalled the Senate's swift overrider.

Sen. Robinson Predicts Adjournment August 1

By the Associated Press.

Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, cautiously forecast yesterday Congress would not adjourn before August 1.

"It is not possible to anticipate now when Congress will be ready to adjourn," Robinson said.

Text of Roosevelt Message

The text of President Roosevelt's message to Congress on tax evasion follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

A condition has been developing during the last few months so serious to the Nation that the Congress and the people are entitled to information about it.

The Secretary of the Treasury has given me a report of a preliminary study of income tax returns for the calendar year 1936. This report reveals efforts at avoidance and evasion of tax liability, so widespread and so amazing, both in their boldness and their ingenuity, that further action without delay seems imperative.

We face a challenge to the power of the Government to collect, uniformly, fairly and without discrimination, taxes based on statutes adopted by the Congress.

Mr. Justice Holmes said: "Taxes are what we pay for civilized society." Too many individuals, however, want the civilization at a discount.

Methods of escape or intended escape from tax liability are many. Some are instances of avoidance which appear to have the color of legality; others are on the borderline of legality; others are plainly contrary even to the letter of the law.

All are alike in that they are definitely contrary to the spirit of the law. All are alike in that they represent a determined effort on the part of those who use them to dodge the payment of taxes which Congress based on ability to pay. All are alike in that failure to pay results in shifting the tax load to the shoulders of others less able to pay, and in mulcting the Treasury of the Government's just due.

Letter Is Cited.

I commend to your attention the following letter from the Secretary of the Treasury:

"The Secretary of the Treasury,

"Washington, May 29, 1937.

"My dear Mr. President:

"As you know, the Treasury was surprised and disturbed by the failure of the receipts from the income tax on March 15 to measure up to the budget estimates. Therefore, we undertook an immediate investigation. Only a preliminary report can be made at this time because the complete investigation covering all the income tax returns filed will require the balance of the year. Furthermore, since many of the returns of large manufacturing corporations have not yet been filed, the present report is confined almost wholly to data disclosed by the individual tax returns.

"But even this preliminary report discloses conditions so serious that immediate action is called for. More than the usual examination and audit by the Treasury is needed. It seems clear that if tax evasion and tax avoidance can be promptly stopped through legislation and regulations resulting from a special investigation a very large portion of the deficiency in revenues will be restored to the Treasury.

"I herewith enumerate some of the principal devices now being employed by taxpayers with large incomes for the purpose of defeating the income taxes which would normally be payable by them. As we continue our preliminary examination, other devices are being disclosed.

"1. The device of evading taxes by setting up foreign personal holding corporations in the Bahamas, Panama, Newfoundland, and other places where taxes are low and corporation laws lax.

"American have formed 64 such companies in the Bahamas alone in 1935 and 1936, and 22 more were organized by Americans in the Bahamas during the past two months. Panama and Newfoundland seem to be even more fertile territory since their corporation laws make it more difficult to ascertain who the actual stockholders are. Moreover, the stockholders have resorted to all manner of devices to prevent the acquisition of information regarding their companies. The companies are frequently organized through foreign lawyers, with dummy incorporators and dummy directors, so that the names of the real parties in interest do not appear.

Instance Pointed Out.

"One American citizen with a $3,000,000 Bahamas corporation has apparently attempted to prevent the Bureau of Internal Revenue from catching up with him by filing his individual tax returns in successive years from towns in New Brunswick, British Columbia and Jamaica.

"Another individual believes that he has been so successful in removing his assets from the United States to the Bahamas that he is defying the Treasury to collect a tax upon a $250,000 fee he has received; and by way of insult, he has offered to compromise his admitted tax liability of $33,000 for past years by a payment of $1,700.

"Still another individual showed a large net loss on his personal return for 1936. In considerable part the loss was due to the large deduction he claims for interest on a loan made to him by his personal holding company. But the man in question is no object of charity, for his personal holding company, organized in Canada, had an income of over $1,500,000 from American dividends in 1936, though it has not yet filed a return.

"Perhaps the most flagrant case of this character is that of a retired American Army officer with a large income from valuable American securities which he desires to sell at a very large profit. To escape our income and inheritance tax laws, he used the device of becoming a naturalized Canadian citizen, and six days later organized four Bahamas corporations to hold his securities. He and his lawyers apparently think that he can now sell his securities free from any taxes on his profits, since there are no income taxes in the Bahamas, and that he has adroitly escaped American taxes.

"2. The device of foreign insurance companies.

"Two New York insurance agents have caused the organization of insurance companies in the Bahamas with a view to enabling taxpayers to secure spurious deductions for interest through an ingenious scheme for the issuance of life insurance policies. Americans who went into the scheme purported to pay a large single premium for their policies, but immediately borrowed back practically the entire sum. Under the plan the so-called policyholders sought to obtain a large deduction for interest on this loan, although the fact was that no interest was really paid. By this means five prominent Americans sought to evade nearly $550,000 in income taxes in the years 1932 to 1936. This fraud was discovered by the Treasury's investigators and all of the taxpayers have now submitted offers to pay the full amount of taxes evaded, plus interest. Until our investigation is completed we do not know how many similar companies may have been organized in other countries, and utilized by our citizens; nor do we yet know whether this newly inon a piece of note-paper, said: "All you receive over $30 is yours—F. B. C."

On the other side of this paper appeared a list of names written one below the other. They were:

"Ralove
Hendricks
George Marshall
Senator Reynolds
The Shoreham
Mr. McDonald."

In his pocket also was found the business card of John Mitchell, real estate dealer, and the name of John C. Wilkes, 1010 Vermont avenue northwest.

The autopsy tonight was ordered after Maddrix had conferred with State Policeman Marlin D. Brubaker, who flew here from Baltimore in a National Guard plane.

It was Brubaker who made an early investigation of the case soon after Keene's disappearance from the boat was discovered by a charwoman at Norfolk. She found his stateroom in disarray, his broken glasses on the floor and bloodstains on the bunk and other places in the room.

Woman's Bag Found.

Keene's body tonight lay in the undertaking establishment of John A. Bradshaw at Crisfield. His son, Charles F. Keene, jr., has ordered that it be brought to Washington to Joseph Gawler & Sons. The son was in New York when news that the body had been found came. He is en route to Washington.

Maddrix, Somerset County Sheriff Dryden and Brubaker left here early tonight for Smith Island. There they will view the three clues—the knife, the hammer and the jack. Smith Island is 25 miles out in the bay from this fishing city.

No money was found in Keene's pockets. The left hip pocket, in which many men carry wallets, was turned inside out. Previously members of Keene's family had reported that he was carrying approximately $40. He was known to have at least $40.

"Red-faced Man" Sought.

While the investigation centered where the body was brought in from the bay, it will not be there long. Police will immediately seek the "red-faced man" who bought Keene a glass of beer on the boat the night he left Washington. This man is thought to be the key personage in the mystery. He was the last man to be seen with Keene—the last man to have contact with him before his disappearance became known.

The key ring which was found inside the mesh bags was without doubt Keene's. It was stamped, "If keys are lost finder will report to the Union Trust Co." Keene's office was in the Union Trust Co. building.

Manila Rope Used.

The suitcase was tied to the murdered man's neck with a length of manila rope.

In addition to searching for the "red-faced man" the police will also try to iron out a discrepancy in their investigation, which was brought out vividly in a hearing on the case held in the Department of Commerce on May 21. At that time Keene's son, who had taken a leading role in the investigation of his disappearance, asked J. Frank Staley, of the Department of Justice, who was presiding:

"Would the court be interested in a falsity?"

Loper Call Is Mystery.

Young Keene asked that T. J. Shannon, purser on the District of Columbia, be recalled to the stand. He was and Keene asked him:

"Do you recall a conversation with me last Saturday?"

Shannon answered yes.

Then Keene inquired:

"Do you remember telling me that a Mrs. Loper occupied the room next to my fathers'. And do you remember saying to me, 'By the way, she called the office in Norfolk. You might follow that up.'"

"I do not recall saying any such thing t you," Shannon replied.

Later Mrs. R. L. Loper, of Norfolk, Va., appeared at the hearing. She occupied the stateroom next to Keene. At the hearing she testified that she heard no unusual sounds during the night. She said she knew absolutely nothing of the case until she read about it in the papers.

Another interesting angle at the hearing was a statement by Detective J. J. Cassidy, who at that time was aiding Brubaker. Cassidy jumped to his feet and shouted:

"There are many conflicting statements in this case. I would like to tell the court what I have discovered."

Cassidy was instructed by Staley to make known his information privately. He did, and it has not been revealed.

Keene was bound for Norfolk on a business deal when he left Washington, it was stated early in the investigation of his disappearance. However, investigators never announced that they had discovered with whom he had business in Norfolk.

It was also stated by Mrs. Keene, widow of the murdered man, that her husband was a friend of long standing of Capt. Chap Posey, master of the District of Columbia. Yet Keene did not visit Posey as he made his last trip down the Potomac on the night boat.

The only evidence, outside the mute testimony of the disordered and bloody stateroom, that officers or members of the crew of the boat have been able to supply to police has been that of William Bowen, watchman.

Bowen told of hearing a sound in the night which might have been a pistol shot.

45,000,000-Acre Farm Cut Urged

The United States, with 365,000,000 acres in its "farm plant," needs from 45,000,000 to 55,000,000 fewer to feed the average 130,000,000 population of the country for the next five years, the Department of Agriculture's crack economists have found.

As they put their views on record, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace was appealing over the radio to farmers for "aroused sentiment" on behalf of his ever-normal granary plan.

"The time has come for both farmers and city people to start working for it," he concluded. "President Roosevelt is our leader in this fight."

Mosby Family Sees Unveiling Of Monument

Senator Rust Presents Shaft to Citizens of Fairfax.

Descendants of Col. John S. Mosby, joined with citizens of Fairfax County yesterday in commemorating the daring capture of a Union General by Mosby during the Civil War.

A monument to Col. Mosby was dedicated on the lawn of the house where Gen. Edwin H. Stoughton was captured by Mosby and 29 Confederate soldiers on March 8, 1863.

R. Walton Moore, of Fairfax, counselor of the State Department and a vestryman of Truro Church where the monument is placed and a personal friend of Col. Mosby gave a brief talk on the capture and events in the war around Fairfax Courthouse. He explained that Mosby raided Fairfax to capture Sir Percy Wyndham, a British soldier of fortune, a member of the Union Army because of remarks made by Wyndham about him. Wyndham had gone to Washington that night so Mosby captured the dashing Union general in command of the troops in northern Virginia at that time.

Generals vs. Horses.

Moore also told of the remark of President Lincoln when the news reached him the next day. The President was more concerned about the mules and horses than he was the general. Linclon said he could replace generals any time, but good horses were hard to find.

State Senator John W. Rust, of Fairfax, presented the monument on behalf of the Fairfax Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, and the strings for the unveiling were pulled by Charles Parrish Coleman and Stuart Mosby Blackwell, great grandchildren of Mosby.

Herbert F. Williams, of Vienna, son of Mosby's companion, when he burst into Stoughton's room, related detailed events of the raid and capture as told by Mosby and his father, Lieut. Williams.

Members of the Mosby family present yesterday were Beverly Clarke, Mosby, son of Col. Mosby. Beverly Coleman, of Langley, and Mrs. J. D. Blackwell, of Warrenton, grandchildren and the two great grandchildren.

Retirement Bill Is Sent to House

An amended bill providing for the retirement of legislative employes was passed by the Senate yesterday and now goes back to the House either for adoption or a conference. One of the principal changes in the House bill is an inclusion of officers and employes of the United States courts not now benefited by the civil service retirement act.

Another prevents the application of the retirement act to any Senate employe until after he has completed 15 years' service. Then, in order to qualify, the legislative employe must deposit a sum equal to the retirement percentage regularly paid by civil service employes, plus 4 per cent interest.

A third proviso states that should an employe who has served for not less than five years become totally disabled before completing 15 years' service he shall be entitled to retiremnt benefits upon deposit of the unpaid premiums.

Borah Asks 'Facts' On Puerto Rico

By the Associated Press.

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, asked in the Senate yesterday for "the facts" surrounding what he said were reports of "iron rule" by the Governor of Puerto Rico.

Addressing his inquiry to Chairman Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, of the Senate Territories Committee, Borah said he was "advised the Governor of Puerto Rico has adopted something in the nature of an iron rule with reference to public meetings or demonstrations of any nature or kind relating to political questions."

He added, "I am told that the governor dashes around through the towns and cities like a Roman consul, surrounded by guards."

Tydings said he would attempt to obtain from the Governor of Puerto Rico and from other sources the facts of the matter.

Standards Bureau Head Asks Standardized Inch

Dr. Lyman J. Briggs, director of the National Bureau of Standards, yesterday told delegates to the twenty-seventh National Congress on Weights and Measures that legislative action should be taken to determine the length of an inch.

Under a proposed bill the length of an inch would be fixed at 25.4 millimeters. This would fall halfway between the present accepted values of the British and United States inches.

The conference will continue through Friday.

Mary D. Boarman, Suitor Who Saved Her Life Are Wed

Mary D. Boarman yesterday became the bride of William F. Ryan, jr., who is credited with saving her life last January when her father slew three members of her family and then committed suicide under the wheels of a freight train.

The couple were married by the Rev. Thomas F. Sweeney, in St. Anthony's Church, Brookland. They left for a trip through New England.

On January 6 the couple narrowly escaped death at the hands of Corbin Boarman, the girl's father, as they drove up to her home on Queens Chapel road. A bullet from Boarman's pistol struck the girl in the arm and pierced Ryan's ear before the youth was able to wrest the gun from Boarman's hand.

Riggs Is Liable In Rheem Deal, U.S. Court Rules

$176,000 Will Be Paid to Noteholders in Shoreham Building Swap.

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday held the Riggs National Bank liable for some $176,000 because of an intricate interchange of deposits, withdrawals and special accounts that preceded the exchange of the Hurley-Wright Building for the Shoreham Office Building. The money, according to attorneys, will go to persons holding notes secured by the Shoreham in instances in which they received neither cash for their notes nor reinvestments.

The opinion was in answer to a suit brought by Shoreham noteholders to recover $811,039.99 from the bank because the latter allegedly permitted the defunct Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey Co. to transfer "earmarked" funds from a special account which was instituted to pay Shoreham noteholders, to a general account subject to withdrawal for any of the Swartzell company's needs.

The Swartzell company sold a note issue for more than $2,000,000 on the Shoreham Building, acquiring title under the names of two of its employes. When the exchange of the buildings was broached, the owners of the Hurley-Wright Building insisted that funds sufficient to pay off the Shoreham noteholders be deposited. Afterward it was discovered there was an overdraft of $176,039.99 traceable to the mortgage firm, and in order to clear that, Edmund D. Rheem, then executive officer of the firm, drew a check for the entire trust, $2,334,750, and indorsed it to the bank for deposit in his company's general account.

When the firm went into bankruptcy the $2,334,750 deposit had been diminished and those holding notes secured by the Shoreham received little if any remuneration.

The court held the bank blameless for permitting the earmarked account to be transferred, but did hold the institution liable for the $176,000 overdraft.

New Archdiocese Of Detroit Made

Detroit, June 1 (AP).—Birthday appointments by Pope Pius XI today made Detroit the seventeenth archdiocese of the Roman Catholic Church in the United States and Bishop Edward Mooney, of Rochester, N. Y., the first archbishop here.

An announcement at Castel Gandolfo, Italy, summer residence of the 80-year-old pontiff, also created a new diocese in Michigan at Lansing and transferred the Grand Rapids and Marquette dioceses to the new Detroit archbishopric.

Auxiliary Bishop Joseph H. Albers, of Cincinnati, was appointed Bishop of Lansing.

Two Parties Hunt For Lost Airliner

Alpine, Utah, June 1 (AP).—Men and pack horses pushed today into the snow-drifted Wasatch Mountains where they expected to find, "perhaps within a day or two," the wreckage of a skyliner and the bodies of five men and two women lost more than five months ago.

Postoffice officials said four or five letters found in snow had been "positively identified" as a part of the cargo carried by the Western Air Express transport which disappeared last December 15.

'Gun Girl' Seized At Bus Terminal On Check Charge

Isabelle Messmer, the 22-year-old "gun girl" who created a stir in police circles when she was taken into custody two years ago, was discovered in Washington once more yesterday, and held for questioning under a year-old lookout.

Arresting officer was Policeman Arthur G. Paul, on traffic duty at Fourteenth street and New York avenue.

"I didn't have much trouble with her," said Paul, "she only weighs about 100 pounds."

Last year Detective Sergt. Eugene Lambert had sent a lookout for the girl, who attracted attention when she was arrested in 1934, after her blonde hair had been noticed under a boy's wig. That arrest led to a 60-day sentence.

He will talk to her, Lambert said, adding that he doubted if he still wanted her. Last night she was being held at the Women's Bureau.

2 Byrd Measures Designed to Cut Federal Expenses

By the Associated Press.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, introduced trail-blazing legislation yesterday in his effort to reorganize the Government and cut expenses.

He offered two bills, one abolishing the RFC and the other giving the Budget Bureau independent status under the President. The latter also would change the independent general accounting office to "Office of Audit and Settlement" responsible to a "financial administration committee" of Congress.

Today the original Byrd committee on reorganization will start public hearings on its first economy measure, a long-deliberated bill to effect an estimated savings of $24,500,000 annually by condensing Federal Housing activities.

It proposes a "Federal Home Credit Administration" to absorb the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and the Federal Housing Administration. All current functions would be carried on under one $10,000 a year administrator.

The savings, Byrd said, would result from abolishing "numerous high-priced officers" and cutting overhead.

Man Is Ruled Dead Although Paroled

Albany, N. Y., June 1 (AP).—The New York Court of Appeals unanimously upheld today a lower court decision that a man is legally dead after the date on which he was sentenced to die for murder, regardless of whether the execution took place.

The decision of the State's highest tribunal was made in the case of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jones, of Rensselaer, N. Y., who were married in May, 1923.

She was the wife of Clyde P. Montgomery, then under sentence of death in North Carolina, briefs in the case disclosed. Montgomery subsequently received commutation to life imprisonment and is now on parole.

home of John Wesley Osborne, brother of the fugitive, Presley said, when they noticed a rider driving a small bunch of cattle toward the Osborne home.

"That wouldnt be him coming this way," Presley said he told his companions, and started to drive away. As the rider drew nearer, Presley said he noticed the rider's stirrups were unusually short.

Rowe joined the bureau January 2, 1935, and was 33 years old and a native of Arkansas.

Guy E. Osborne, the man Rowe was seeking to arrest, was wanted in Muskogee, Okla., as a fugitive from justice, Quinn said, under the national motor vehicle act.

The widow of the agent, eleventh of the service to die from underworld bullets in the war on crime, was expected to receive approximately $6,340 voluntarily contributed by G-men.

There is no compensation for a Federal agent's family if he is killed in the line of duty, but a unique compensation plan of the bureau provides that each of the bureau's 634 special special agents and accountants shall voluntarily contribute $10 to a trust fund. A new fund is established after each death.

The present fund, which goes to Mrs. Rowe, was set up May 1, replacing a previous fund of $7,156 which was paid the father of Wimberly W. Baker, April 18.

Hoover has been notified in St. Louis of Rowe's death.

Presents to Wallis Dropped by Planes

Monts, June 1 (AP).—Wedding presents came by parachute from airplanes today for Wallis Warfield and the Duke of Windsor.

Two ships, believed royal airforce planes from Britain, appeared over the Chateau de Cande at tea time, swooped low and dropped parachute packages onto the golf course.

Caterers bustled about the moss-covered chateau today, a half dozen new servants arrived, and another telephone operator went to work—all to speed final preparations for the wedding two days hence. The wedding hour was moved up to 11:30 a. m.

There will be a wedding cake, 19 inches high, and decorated with 83 forget-me-nots (40 for Mrs. Warfield's age and 43 for the Duke), the wedding breakfast and a dash to the train for honeymoon in Austria.

Bankruptcy Plea Of Alleged Bandit Lists $7,501 'Assets'

New York, June 1 (AP).—Robert J. Suhay, accused bank robber and slayer, filed a bankruptcy petition today, listing as "assets" $7,501, which officials claim he obtained in an $18,000 holdup.

Suhay, 23, awaiting trial at Topeka, Kans., on a charge of slaying a Federal officer who sought to arrest him for the $18,000 March 12 robbery of the Northern Westchester Bank at Katonah, N. Y., filed the petition in court here.

Suhay's doubtful claim to the money as "assets" is further complicated by his contention that it now is in the hands of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Among his "liabilities," Suhay listed $4,000 he said he owed his brother Joseph for board, lodging

Text of Roosevelt's Message Cites Increase in Tax Evasion

Condition So Serious Public Should Be Informed, He Warns; Letter of Treasury Chief Revealed.

Another Method.

"3. The device of domestic personal holding companies.

"The rates of tax applicable to personal holding companies were reduced in 1936 at the time of the enactment of the undistributed profits tax. It was believed at that time that the combined rates of the two taxes would be sufficient to insure the distribution of the entire incomes of these companies, and the consequent imposition of surtaxes upon their owners. This expectation has not been realized.

"Thus, the single stockholders of one large personal holding company saved himself $322,000 by causing his company to distribute none of its income to him.

"In another case, a man and his wife saved $791,000 through the use of personal holding companies in 1936.

"In a third case, the personal holding company reported over $500,000 of net income, but the total taxes paid by the two stockholders, husband and wife, were less than $60,000, due principally to credits for payments on indebtedness the holding company prudently incurred in accumulating properties for its owners. If the personal holding company had not been in existence, the stockholders would have paid over $200,000 additional incomes taxes.

"Another favorite device is to organize a considerable number of personal holding companies, not only for the sake of reducing the tax, but of increasing the Treasury's difficulties in auditing transactions between companies. At last accounts one man had caused to be set up some 95 companies scattered all over the country. Two other individuals were utilizing 23 personal holding companies.

"4. The device of incorporating yachts and country estates.

"Many wealthy taxpayers today are dodging the express provisions of the law denying deductions for personal expenses by incorporating their yachts or their country estates, turning over to the yacht or to the estate securities yielding an income just sufficient to pay the entire expenses of operation. Hundreds of thousands of dollars in income taxes are annually avoided in this way.

Company Owns Yacht.

"Thus, one man's yacht is owned by his personal holding company, along with $3,000,000 in securities. He rents the yacht from his company for a sum far less than the cost of upkeep, and the company uses its income from the securities to pay the wages of the captain and crew, the expenses of operating the yacht, and an annual depreciation allowance. None of these items would be deductible if this individual owned the yacht personally.

"A great many wealthy taxpayers are utilizing a similar arrangement for the operation of their country places and town houses.

"One man has placed his five million dollar city residence in such a corporation; another his racing stable whose losses last year were nearly $200,000. The tax savings he thus sought to obtain through the use of the holding company were $140,000.

"One wealthy woman has improved on the general plan of evasion by causing her personal holding company, which owns her country place, to employ her husband at a salary to manage it. She can thereby supply him with pocket money, and in effect claims a tax deduction for the expense of maintaining him.

"5. The device of artificial deductions for interest, losses, etc.

"Taxpayers are seeking greatly to reduce their personal income taxes by claiming deductions for interest on loans to them by their personal holding companies, or on loans to them by their family trusts. These transactions normally have no business purpose, but are merely an artificial means of shifting income from one member of the family subject to high surtax rates to another member of the family subject to lower rates.

"Thus, one woman claims a large annual deduction for interest on a loan made to her by her husband as trustee of a trust which she created for their children. The mother thereby seeks to secure a deduction for her contribution to the children's support, and since the trust is revocable by her husband, the parents still have the desired control over the property and its income.

"In the same category are losses deducted by taxpayers who claim that their racing stables or hobby farms were operated for profit, even though a profit is never realized. Thus, a prominent manufacturer seeks a deduction of over $125,000 against his income from his business, on account of his losses in operating a chicken farm.

Multiple Trusts Created.

"6. The device of the creation of multiple trusts for relatives and dependents.

"Splitting income two ways, between husband and wife, reduces income taxes and leaves the family income intact. Splitting the family income many ways by means of many trusts, while leaving the money actually in the same hands. For the creator of the trust often constitutes himself or his wife as trustee, and thus retains full control over the investment and disposition of the fund itself and of its income.

"One thrifty taxpayer has formed 64 trusts for the benefit of four members of his immediate family, and thereby claims to have saved them over $485,000 in one year in taxes.

"Another thrifty pair has constituted 40 trusts for their relatives, and a prominent lawyer and his wife utilize 16 trusts for the same purpose. The first pair maintains numbered brokerage accounts and only at the end of the year are the beneficial owners identified. In this way innumerable transactions are carried on, often between accounts, which do not actually affect the beneficial interests of their owners, but which are designed solely to reduce tax liability.

"7. The device of husband and wife or father and children partnerships.

"The purpose of these partnerships, like the multiple trusts, is to split the family income artificially into two parts; or, if the children are taken in, into still smaller fractions.

"There are many instances of this kind; but to illustrate the point, it is sufficient to cite the case of a New York brokerage firm which late in 1935 admitted into partnership the four minor children, two boys and two girls, of one of the partners. The tax saving he sought thereby in 1936 amounted to over $50,000.

And Pension Trusts.

"8. The device of pension trusts.

"For ten years the revenue acts have sought to encourage pension trusts for aged employes by providing corporations with a special deduction on account of contributions thereto, and exempting the trust itself from tax. Recently this exemption has been twisted into a means of tax avoidance by the creation of pension trusts which include as beneficiaries only small groups of officers and directors who are in the high income brackets. In this fashion high salaried officers seek to provide themselves with generous retiring allowances, while at the same time the corporation claims a deduction therefor, in the hope that the fund may accumulate income free from tax.

"Thus in one case $43,000 is annually appropriated by the corporation to a pension trust for the benefit of its two chief owners. One of the co-owners will retire at the age of 65 with a monthly pension of $1,725, and the other will retire at 60 with a monthly pension of $1,425.

"These eight types of tax avoidance are sufficient to show that there is a well-defined purpose and practice on the part of some taxpayers to defeat the intent of Congress to tax incomes in accordance with ability to pay. In some cases, the Bureau of Internal Revenue under existing law can establish a liability or indeed proceed on the ground of fraud; but many of these cases fall into the category of a legal though highly immoral avoidance of the intent of the law. It seems, therefore, that legislation should be passed at this session of the Congress in order to eliminate these loopholes which our preliminary investigation has proved; and that as a result of the further investigation this summer and autumn the next session of the Congress should finally close any further loopholes which may be discovered.

Other Major Instances.

"In addition to these cases of moral fraud, there are three other major instances in which the law itself permits individuals and corporations to avoid their equitable share of the tax burden.

"1. Percentage depletion.

"This is perhaps the most glaring loophole in our present revenue law. Since 1928 large oil and mining corporations have been entitled to deduct from 5 to 27½ per cent of their gross income as an allowance for the depletion of their mines or wells, and the deduction may be taken even though the cost of the property has been completely recovered. Thus, in 1936, one mining company deducted nearly $3,000,000 under this provision, although it had already completely recovered the cost of its property. The amount of the deduction was a sheer gift from the United States to this taxpayer and its stockholders, and the revenue that we lost thereby was $818,000. Similar annual losses of revenue in the cases of a few other typical companies are $584,000; $557,000; $512,000; $272,000; $267,000; $202,000, and $152,000. The estimated annual loss of revenue due to this source alone is about $75,000,000. I recommended in 1933 that this provision be eliminated but nothing was done at that time; and it has since remained unchanged.

"This is another major cause of revenue loss, which is unjustifiable because obtained at the expense of taxpayers in the 40 States which do not have community property laws. A New York resident with a salary of $100,000 pays about $32,525 Federal income tax; a Californian with the same salary may cause one half to be reported by his wife and the Federal income taxes payable by the two will be only $18,626. The total loss of revenue due to this unjustifiable discrimination against the residents of 40 States runs into the millions.

"3. Taxation of nonresident aliens.

"The 1936 act eliminated the requirement that a nonresident alien (without United States office or business) should file a return; fixed the withholding rate for individuals at 10 per cent, and freed the nonresident alient from taxation on American capital gains. Since the total Federal tax upon a citizen or resident amounts to 10 per cent of his total net income at about $25,000 (in the case of a married individual with no dependents) the withholding rate has proved in practice to be too low as applied to wealthy nonresident alien individuals. There are a number of cases of nonresident aliens with large incomes from American trusts or with large American investments whose taxes have been cut to one-third or one-fifth of what they paid under the prior act.

More Cases Cited.

"Thus, one American woman who married an Englishman had an income from this country in 1935 of nearly $300,000. Her tax for 1936 will, therefore, be approximately $30,000 as against over $160,000 under the prior law.

"Another American woman who married a Frenchman has an income of over $150,000 from American trusts, on which she paid a tax of about $55,000 in 1935. Her tax is reduced to about $15,000 by the 1936 law. Although the tightening of the withholding provisions in 1936 will tend to insure more revenue from non-resident aliens in the lower income brackets, the present taxing provisions are not satisfactory as applied to non-resident aliens with incomes in the higher brackets.

"The problem of tax avoidance is not new. The Congress devoted particular attention to it in 1933 and 1934, and by legislation effectively put a stop to many evasive devices discovered then as having been in use. The practices outlined above can and should be stopped in the same way.

"In conclusion, I have two observations to make from the evidence before me. In the first place, the instances I have given above are disclosed by a quick check of comparatively few individual returns. As I have said before, most of the large corporation returns have not yet been filed. The general audit of 1936 returns is just beginning. Nevertheless, it is likely that the cases I have digested above are symptomatic of a large number of others, which will be disclosed by the usual careful audit.

"In the second place, the ordinary salaried man and the small merchant does not resort to these or similar devices. The great bulk of our 5,500,000 returns are honestly made. Legalized avoidance or evasion by the so-called leaders of the business community is not only demoralizing to the revenues; it is demoralizing to those who practice it as well. It throws an additional burden of taxation upon the other members of the community who are less able to bear it, and who are already cheerfully bearing their fair share. The success of our revenue system depends equally upon fair administration by the Treasury and upon completely honest returns by the taxpayer.

"The disclosures are so serious that I recommend that authority be given to the Treasury Department with an adequate appropriation in order that a complete and immediate investigation may be conducted. The cost of such an investigation will be returned many times over to the Treasury of the United States.

"Faithfully,

"HENRY MORGENTHAU, JR."

'Clever Little Schemes.

A feeling of indignation on reading this letter will, I am confident, be yours, as it was mine. What the facts set forth mean to me is that we have reached another major difficulty in the maintenance of the normal processes of our Government. We are trying harder than ever before to relieve suffering and want, to protect the weak, to curb avarice, to prevent booms and depressions—and to balance the budget.

Taxation necessary to these ends is the foundation of sound Governmental finance. When our legitimate revenues are attacked, the whole structure of our Government is attacked. "Clever little schemes" are not admirable when they undermine the foundations of society.

The three great branches of the Government have a joint concern in this situation. First, it is the duty of the Congress to remove new loopholes devised by attorneys for clients willing to take an unethical advantage of society and their own Government. Second, it is the duty of the executive branch of the Government to collect taxes, to investigate fully all questionable cases, to prosecute where wrong has been done, and to make recommendations for closing loopholes. Third, it is the duty of the courts to give full consideration to the intent of the Congress in passing tax laws and to give full consideration to all evidence which points to an objective of evasion on the part of the taxpayer.

Very definitely the issue immediately before us is the single one relating to the evasion or unethical avoidance of existing laws. That should be kept clearly in mind by the Congress and the public. Already efforts to befog this issue appear. Already certain newspaper publishers are seeking to make it appear, first, that if an individual can devise unanticipated methods to avoid taxes which the Congress intended him to pay, he is doing nothing unpatriotic or unethical, and, second, that because certain individuals do not approve of high income tax brackets, or the undistributed earnings tax, or the capital gains tax, the first duty of the Congress should be the repeal or reductions of those taxes. In other words, not one but many red herrings are in preparation.

But it seems to me that the first duty of the Congress is to empower the Government to stop these evil practices, and that legislation to this end should not be confused with legislation to revise tax schedules. That is a wholly different subject.

In regard to that subject, I have already suggested to the Congress that at this session there should be no new taxes and no changes of rates. And I have indicated to the Congress that the Treasury will be prepared by next November to present to the appropriate committees information on the basis of which the Congress may, if it chooses, undertake revisions of the tax structure.

The long-term problem of tax policy is wholly separate from the immediate problem of glaring evasion and avoidance of existing law.

In this immediate problem the decency of American morals is involved.

The example of successful tax dodging by a minority of very rich individuals breeds efforts by other people to dodge other laws as well as tax laws.

It is also a matter of deep regret to know that lawyers of high standing at the bar not only have advised and are advising their clients to utilize tax avoidance devices, but are actively using these devices in their own personal affairs. We hear too often from lawyers, as well as from their clients, the sentiment "It is all right to do it if you can get away with it."

"I am confident that the Congress will wish to enact legislation at this session specifically and exclusively aimed at making the present tax structure evasion-proof.

I am confident also that the Congress will give to the Treasury all authority necessary to expand and complete the present preliminary investigation, including, of course, full authority to summon witnesses and compel their testimony. The ramifications and the geographical scope of a complete investigation make it necessary to utilize every power of Government which can contribute to the end desired.

A feature of the commencement recessional was formation of an arch by the junior students, who stood on either side of a center aisle and held aloft wands decorated with the school colors, as the graduates marched through.

He was a native of Richmond, Va. During the war he served in New Hampshire and Massachusetts. Following the war he was on duty here in the Bureau of Construction and Repair for four years, later returning to New Hampshire.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Josephine Tarbell Ferrell, and two daughters.

San Diego, Calif., June 1 (AP).—Equipped with special electrically-operated combs, two "bring 'em back alive" zoologists plunged into the wilds of the city dog pound today and emerged with 68 fleas.

The fleas were bottled and sent airmail to the Hagenbach animal farms in Germany. Head Zoo Keeper C. A. Smith and Dr. L. F. Conti, leaders of the novel "Safari," said the variety of flea they captured was sought by the German concern because they do not bite human beings.

Nazis Threaten Vatican Break Over U.S. Cleric

By the United Press.

Berlin, June 1.—The Nazi government threatened tonight, in an angry note to Pope Pius XI, to break off diplomatic relations with the Vatican because of a speech by George Cardinal Mundelein, of Chicago, describing Adolf Hitler as "an Austrian paper-hanger" and a poor one at that.

"The Holy See has supported, unqualifiedly, public attacks by one of its highest dignitaries upon the head of the German state," the note said.

"This unexpected attitude on the part of the Holy See may make impossible the continuation of normal relations between Germany and the Vatican. The Holy See alone is responsible for this development."

Holds Prelates Privileged.

The warning of a possible rupture of diplomatic relations followed a Vatican note to Berlin, explaining that archbishops and bishops of the Roman Catholic Church are privileged to speak on topics as they see fit, and that the Vatican was in no way responsible for Cardinal Mundelein's attacks.

A break between Berlin and the Vatican would climax 18 months of controversy, starting with the Nazis' tightening of their control over religious schools in Germany, the morality trials of many priests and monks and more recently the banning of 200 Catholic newspapers.

The German note expressed "keen surprise and shock to think that the Vatican has left the German representation without an answer on the pretext that the cardinal (Mundelein) merely reciprocated attacks in a like manner—a theory which is not substantiated, not justified and incorrect."

Assailed Reich Acts.

Cardinal Mundelein attacked the German government in an address before 300 priests in Chicago, for its "persecution" of the Catholic church and referred to Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels' "lying" propaganda ministry.

Goebbels made an angry answer to the Chicago cardinal in a speech at Berlin's Deutschland Halle last Friday, intimating that further action would be taken to demand satisfaction for the attacks.

Pope Cancels Speech.

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, June 1 (U.P.). Pope Pius, worried by the acute situation existing between Germany nad the Holy See, tonight refused to be drawn into a new controversy with the Nazis.

The Holy Father, who celebrtaed his eightieth birthday yesterday, canceled a speech which was to have been read at the inauguration of the Pontifical Academy of Sciences because it criticized Germany for refusing to permit five German members to participate in the ceremonies.

He had prepared a strong crtiicism of Nazi church affairs. Because of the Spanish situation he decided to cancel it.

Nazi Propaganda Chief Seeks Tourist Boosters

Berlin, June 1 (AP).—Germany wants tourists who will go home and preach the gospel of Nazidom.

Walther Funk, state secretary to the propaganda ministry, told an 18-nation tourist bureau convention today: "We have the greatest interest in a foreigner taking the best impression away with him. For thus he will become a propagandist for the new Germany which must daily defend itself against a whole world of malevolence and calumny."

French Arrest Italian In Rail Bombing Plot

Perpignan, France, June 1 (AP).—The glow of a cigarette led French gendarmes to a time bomb in the International Railway tunnel to Portbou, Spain, and to an Italian whom authorities held today for questioning.

The bomb was in a vacuum bottle with a clock works and dynamite cap. Police exploded the device when the clock hands reached 3:30.

Laws in Canada Permit U.S. Firms To Evade Taxes

Ottawa, June 1 (Canadian Press). Canadian income tax officials tonight expressed keen interest in President Roosevelt's tax message to Congress but, maintaining their customary secrecy in such matters, declined to say how many holding companies have been incorporated in Canada by United States citizens.

The Canadian income tax act has a provision exempting from taxation" the income of incorporated companies whose business and assets are carried on and situate entirely outside Canada."

This provision, it was disclosed, has resulted in many companies being incorporated here.

Discussing the suggestion that United States citizens have incorporated companies in Canada which in turn organized companies in the Bahamas, where there are no taxes, to hold United States securities, the officials said there might be advantages to American investors.

Sen. Pope Still Backs Roosevelt Court Plan

By the Associated Press.

Senator Pope (Democrat), of Idaho, said yesterday the "judicial reforms suggested by President Roosevelt are wise and meritorious" and should not be abandoned.

Expanding a statement earlier in the week that the impelling necessity for the bill has been removed by recent Supreme Court decisions, Pope vigorously denied he had switched.

Churches Reopen In Mexican State

Nogales, Sonora, Mex., June 1 (AP). Long-silenced church bells pealed throughout Sonora today, calling the Catholic faithful to the first legal services in almost three years.

A continuous procession filed into the musty places of worship padlocked in September, 1934, and knelt at dust-covered altars to say prayers they had dared repeat only in the privacy of their homes since the church ban was invoked.

Reopening of churches through co-operation of the state and federal government brought to an end the "kneel down" demonstration which started here last Thursday night after 5,000 citizens had paraded the downtown district.

Philadelphia, June 1 (AP).—The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. has closed 80 stores and the American Stores Co. about 50 in the Philadelphia area in a protest against passage of a chain store tax bill now in the Legislature.

Rain Falls at Pole; Telephone Service Available on Floe

Moscow, June 1 (AP).—It was so warm around the North Pole today that it rained instead of snowing.

Temperature at the Soviet Union's North Pole base camp, now about 65 miles from the pole, was 28.4 degrees above zero Fahrenheit. A drizzle fell. Fog kept all planes of the expedition grounded and the heavy transports settled somewhat into the softening snow.

The ice floe on which the camp rests continued its slow drift away from the pole. It also drifted further away from its stranded fourth plane, that of I. P. Mazuruk, now more than 40 miles distant.

N. Y. U. Medical Dean Dies of Heart Ailment

New York, June 1 (AP).—Heart disease, the ailment in which he specializes as a physician, was listed tonight as the apparent cause of the death of Dr. John Wyckoff, 55, dean of the New York University and Bellevue Hospital Medical College.

His illness was listed first on hospital and police records as morphine poisoning, but later it was changed to coronary thrombosis.

Dr. Thomas A. Gonzales, acting chief medical examiner, said: "Dr. Wyckoff had been a sufferer from coronary arterio-sclerosis for a number of years

Chamberlain's Industry Tax Is Abandoned

Premier Forced to Give Up Scheme to Finance 5-Year Arms Plan.

By the United Press.

London June 1.—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain tonight suffered a major defeat, after only four days in the premiership, when he was forced to abandon his "profits tax" on British industry as a means of financing the nation's $7,500,000,000 rearmament program.

The tax was designed to produce $75,000,000 in its first year as a "national defense contribution" toward the five-year arms schedule.

Chamberlain, who succeded Stanley Baldwin as prime minister Friday, has been bitterly attacked by industrialists for the tax plan which he drafted as chancellor of the exchequer.

He added, however, that industry will not escape paying a large part of rearmament cost.

Chamberlain answered sharply Laborite taunts he had balanced the British budget by repudiating the war debt to the United States.

"It is not true that we repudiated the American debt," he said. "During two years of the Labor government it is true that they paid the United States £46,500,000, but they received in debt payments and reparations £54,000,000, whereas the national government paid £32,500,000 to the United States but received only £800,000.

Prince Konoye Starts to Build Nippon Cabinet

Forming Coalition Group; Koki Hirota Probable Foreign Minister.

Tokyo, June 1.—Forty-five-year-old Prince Fumimaro Konoye, member of one of Japan's oldest families, began today the formation of a new cabinet amid favorable indications that he would be able to unite the hitherto opposing military and political party leaders.

It was the political party element which forced Gen. Senjuro Hayashi and his army-inclined cabinet to resign after only four months in office. The politicos charged Hayashi with favoring a type of Fascist government and criticized his foreign policy, particularly his asserted failure to adjust Sino-Japanese relations.

But Prince Konoye, president of the House of Peers, prominent in Japanese public affairs since he left school in 1917 and well known in the United States, appeared to be building a coalition government, with Japan's ablest leaders to support him.

Former Premier Koki Hirota was considered the probable choice for foreign minister. Gen. Gen Sugiyama gave first indication of army support by deciding to retain his post as minister of war. Minister of marine, Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai, was expected to be another holdover from the Hayashi regime.

G. O. P. Gains in 1938 Predicted by Hamilton

New York June 1 (AP).—John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the National Republican Committee, said here today that he expects the Republican Party to have a working organization in Congress after the 1938 elections, with enough power to virtually influence the Presidential election in 1940.

The party, he predicted, will probably draw into its fold many prominent conservative Democrats, and will emphasize social and economic legislation.

Taxis In Washington.

During each of the last several years bills have been laid before the Senate and House District Committees which would add to the local Public Utilities Commission act a "convenience and necessity" rule. To date, no action has been taken by either committee. Their negligence is especially strange because virtually every influential voice in the city has spoken in approval of the bills—the P. U. C., the District Commissioners, the Federation of Citizens Associations, the Board of Trade, etc.

A "convenience and necessity" rule would empower the P. U. C. to limit the number of common carriers in Washington. Nearly every other large city in the country keeps a check on the size of its taxicab fleet. Here, however, anyone able to qualify for a license can add his cab to the 4,700 already clogging the streets. Something between 2,500 and 3,000 would be sufficient to supply the city's needs for this type of transportation.

Even the hackers themselves have come to agree to this viewpoint. The president of a newly reorganized taxi drivers' brotherhood thinks that curtailment might be properly achieved by withdrawing the licenses of drivers convicted of traffic offenses. Another method of reducing the number of cabs in operation would be merely to refuse to issue new licenses, depending on voluntary retirements to eliminate the surplus.

The support of the taxi drivers should stir Congress into some positive move. The action they seem to favor may not be the best, for they visualize a law limiting the number of cabs to a specific maximum. What would serve the city adequately today might not be enough tomorrow. It would be far better to authorize the P. U. C. to regulate taxicab transportation in the public interest as the bills already introduced would provide.

For Better Federal Judges.

The bill approved by the House Judiciary Committee recently to facilitate the removal of incompetent judges in the lower Federal courts should not be confused with President Roosevelt's judiciary bill. It is not designed to influence the decisions of judges. Nor does it attempt to measure judicial capacity by age. The purpose of the committee is only to eliminate judges who are unfit to hold their judicial posts.

For many years Federal district judges who have become mentally incapacitated, who have proved to be ignorant of the law or otherwise incompetent to exercise the judicial function, have been a serious problem. The only method of removing such judges is by impeachment. But this extraordinary procedure is unsatisfactory for obvious reasons. Impeachment proceedings must be initiated by the House of Representatives, and trials on charges by the House must be conducted by the Senate. Neither body has time to consider such cases adequately.

Moreover, impeachment carries a stigma that should not be applied to conscientious judges when their capacity fails. Only the most flagrant abuses can be corrected by impeachment. Indeed, the record shows that only nine Federal judges have been impeached by the House during the last 150 years, and only four of these were later convicted by the Senate. In some cases where conviction is believed to have been warranted, the necessary two-thirds majority has not been obtained because some Senators have failed to hear and weigh the evidence.

With this record in mind, the House Judiciary Committee has attempted to devise a new method of handling the problem. Under the Constitution Federal judges hold their jobs "during good behavior." The House bill would permit that body to put a judge on trial whenever his behavior is believed by a majority to be "other than good." But trial on these charges would be held before three judges of the Circuit Courts of Appeals selected for that purpose by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. If this special court should sustain the accusation, the judge would be removed from office.

In some cases the House might base charges on political antagonism, but the trial court would doubtless afford adequate protection against conviction on such grounds. Success of the plan would depend in large measure upon the attitude of the courts toward this new assignment. It is doubly important, therefore, that the advice of the Supreme Court be obtained before Congress acts upon this bill.

In no case, however, can a measure of this sort be regarded as a guarantee against incompetence on the Federal bench. The best way to elevate the prestige of the bench is to appoint only jurists of recognized learning, ability and integrity. If political considerations were eliminated and all judges were selected solely on the basis of merit, there would be very little need for any additional safeguards against judicial ineptitude.

Representative Sumner's bill is a thoughtful approach to an important problem. It is entitled to careful study. If it should prove acceptable to Congress, however, one of its most favorable results may be increased pressure upon the President to choose better judges in the first place.

Sloppy Tax Legislation.

Some very convincing evidence of widespread tax evasion and avoidance has been uncovered by the Treasury. Tax lawyers seeking loopholes through which wealthy clients may escape payment of large sums due the Government have found the revenue laws of recent years veritable happy hunting grounds. As President Roosevelt's message on the subject indicates, it is to the interest of taxpayers as well as the Government to prevent this loss of revenue.

Both the President and Secretary Morgenthau, however, are inclined to misplace responsibility for the difficulties which the Bureau of Internal Revenue has encountered. The President insists that "in this immediate problem the decency of American morals is involved." Secretary Morgenthau concludes that "many of these cases fall in the category of a legal though highly immoral avoidance of the intent of the law." In both cases the point is labored beyond its merits. Taxes are paid because the law requires such action, and not because the taxpayer feels any moral compunction to divide his income with the Treasury.

This emphasis upon "immoral avoidance of the intent of the law" has the appearance of an excuse for sloppy legislation. Congress and the Treasury should have learned long ago that the only way to prevent tax-dodging is to make the law evasion-proof Moralizing on the part of the President is not likely to bring a dime into the Treasury. For taxpayers are inclined to interpret the law in that light which will be most favorable to themselves. If the law permits them to save money by setting up a corporation, many will have no more hesitancy than did President Roosevelt in his attempt to pack the Supreme Court to save some of his questionable legislation.

By all means Congress should remedy this situation before adjourning for the summer. It would be unfortunate, however, if Congress should merely attempt to close a few avenues of escape pointed out by the Treasury and leave other grave defects in our revenue laws untouched. To the President it is simply a question of forcing a relatively small number of individuals to remit taxes which Congress intended them to pay. But in some cases, the intent of Congress is by no means clear. The law needs to be clarified as well as patched up to prevent tax avoidance.

In some instances, moreover, unwise provisions should be corrected. Apparently some of the worst abuses have arisen as a result of the undistributed profits tax. While plugging up the loopholes through which tax-dodgers have been able to wriggle Congress could also give relief to railroads that are seriously penalized by this law. In doing so, it would merely be complying with the considered advice of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Development of low-cost housing through private enterprise, assisted by the FHA, is also seriously handicapped by the undistributed profits tax. Limited-dividend corporations co-operating with the FHA cannot, of course, distribute extra earnings, and under this law they are penalized for permitting such earning to accumulate. Even if the basic weaknesses of the tax cannot wholly be eliminated at this session, Congress might at least correct glaring inconsistencies of this sort.

Case Reopened.

One popular reaction to the discovery of Charles Keene's body in Chesapeake Bay two weeks after he had disappeared from the Norfolk boat may be simply: "The plot thickens." It does, of course, but that comment indicates a complacency the affair ill deserves.

It is a ghastly case. A respectable Washington businessman embarks on a night trip to a nearby city. When his cabin is unlocked in the morning, it is found in considerable disarray, stained with blood, and with no trace of its occupant. Now the badly mutilated corpse is found, barely floating because of weights tied about the neck. From the condition of the lungs it is evident that he was killed and tied before being thrown overboard. A coroner's jury deems it murder but no clew as to the perpetrator has been found. Not since the slaying of Corinna Loring has such a horrible mystery developed in the vicinity of the Capital.

The entire community will hope for a better disposition of the Keene case. At the start, it appeared to be shuttled back and forth between police departments in a disheartening manner. Federal investigators considered it outside their province, but at last the Department of Commerce called for a review of what little evidence had been gathered. Nothing certain, however, was concluded from this hearing. And, until yesterday, interest in the case seemed to lapse among the authorities.

Now, with the discovery of the body and clear evidence of murder to work on, the investigation will revive. But until every possible angle of the sickening crime has been thoroughly explored, the public—to say nothing of the bereaved family and friends—will remain unsatisfied.

Britain's Way—And Germany's.

Two days before the Ibiza incident, aerial bombs from Spanish government planes engaged in a raid on the insurgent-held town of Palma, Mallorca, narrowly missed hitting the British flotilla leader, H. M. S. Hardy.

Instead of raising a clamor about "the warlike maneuvers of Bolshevist murder gangs," instead of issuing an order to its battleships to bomb some Spanish government port by way of reprisal, thus assuaging its anger in a blood bath, the British government kept its shirt on.

No action of any kind was taken by Great Britain for several days, presumably while an investigation into the circumstances surrounding the near-bombing was undertaken. And when Great Britain did act this action took the wholly legitimate and peaceful form of a note of protest to the Valencia government to cease interference with neutral shipping. For its part, the Spanish government gave assurances that it was prepared to permit the establishment of a "safety zone" for neutral warships off Palma.

In every particular, therefore, Britain's action was in glaring contrast with that of Nazi Germany. It is true, there were no casualties on the Hardy, while more than a score resulted from the attack on the Deutschland. Yet the British ship has never been accused, as the German battleship has been, of having fired on loyalist planes.

The cool-headedness displayed by Great Britain in this matter is a quality very greatly needed in a situation which, because of Nazi ruthlessness, has brought Europe once again to the brink of disaster. There is every reason to believe that the London government, in co-operation with France, is straining every nerve to prevent that situation from getting out of hand. And in this connection it is somewhat encouraging that both the Berlin and Rome governments have informed London that they regard the non-intervention program as still applicable to them in every respect except for their participation in the naval patrol of Spanish waters.

This circumstance can be turned to good advantage. Since the outset of the control scheme the Valencia government has openly expressed fears that the Italo-German naval patrol of the coast held by the loyalists might be used for aggressive purposes. The wanton and utterly inexcusable bombardment of Almeria, a not untypical illustration of Nazi Schrecklichkeit, proves that these fears were not unwarranted.

The opportunity now presents itself to Great Britain and France to take over the whole sea patrol. Such a development might effectively prevent any further spread of the Spanish fires by making the non-intervention agreement really binding. In the meantime there is some hope in the apparent reluctance of the Fascist powers to plunge Europe into a bloody war.

Fidgets On The Farm.

"What Makes Us Behave Like Homer the Goat" might well be the title of a book dealing with the case histories now being prepared by Cornell University on its newly purchased farm at Ithaca, N. Y. There Dr. Howard Scott Liddell and co-workers will attempt to determine whether the "heebie jeebies" are hereditary or simply the result of matter's triumph over mind. Two sets of animals will be put under observation—those that can take it and those that can't. Already a goat and a pig, forced to eat under circumstances imposed on human beings by civilization, have gone over on the smelling salts side.

If hogs have hysterics after being exposed to present-day amenities, then what chance do human beings have? That, in a nutshell, is what Dr. Liddell is trying to find out. To this end, the animals will get a chance to see what life is like with all the so-called modern conveniences, such as eating amidst glaring lights, noise and confusion or sleeping with radios blaring and automobile horns sounding off at regular intervals.

In order to make the experiment a thorough one, the animals should also be herded through traffic at a rush hour; given an income tax blank to fill out; and compelled to wear two layers of clothing when the thermometer registers 90 in the shade. It wouldn't take more than a week of such nerve-wracking routine to have the hogs counting sheep at night, as we so-called modern homo sapiens are wont to do.

An Empty Victory.

From the Chicago Herald and Examiner.

Leaders in the battle for the right of women in Illinois to qualify for jury service have won a victory in the lower house at Springfield. The victory, however, is a doubtful one.

Amendments tacked onto the bill by its opponents would exclude mothers, women under 25, school teachers and expectant mothers. Thus, not only is the constitutionality of the bill open to question, but the exemptions would disqualify fully half the eligibles. As to the classes for whom exemptions are proposed, it may be submitted that anyone receiving a jury summons may always be excused for cause.

It is to be hoped that when the measure reaches the Senate it will be reshaped into its original form. Chicago's experience with sex criminals and the recent Zintak jury scandals furnish excellent arguments in favor of mixed juries.

The Abattoir.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We were "struck" with the originality of the pro-abattoir controversy in a recent issue of The Post.

Why not add a "tannery" as an adjunct that might sweeten this proposition sufficiently to break down further opposition?

Being somewhat job conscious, Federal bureaucracies and their leading lights rarely stick their necks out. To go against the stock-raisers or packers who dominate the real production-trade-distribution associations, would be costly to any factor of the Bureau of Animal Husbandry, or any other governmental agency.

But for the Gobel management, with its semi-political and legal set-up, to persist against public opinion does not build good will. It is time the real issues were brought out into the open.

Why not include the indemnification expected as an added burden in the District of Columbia's deficiency appropriation, and pay 'em off? Since there are more desirable locations holding greater economic attractiveness than this old site happens to possess, we, the people, should be given a little more consideration.

To attempt to counteract opposition by use of some new air-conditioned, deodorized, dehydrated, packaged spreads for gentlemen gardeners, or to be shelved next to flour or rolled oats at your corner grocery, and enhance the value of home property situated adjacent to one of these new-fangled odorless-smokeless-noiseless rendering plants, is rather unique license.

Report On Russia.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Webster's dictionary defines the word "liberal" as an opponent of conservatism. "Aristotle," who wrote in your paper on May 27 is far from being a liberal, as he claims. A true liberal is a Socialist, or a Communist or an ardent union man, and is always sympathetic to the masses' interests. A liberal is always on the side of majority and against the plundering minority.

To say, like pseudo-liberal "Aristotle" said, that there is no democracy in Russia is either sheer ignorance or outright Fascism. I just came from Soviet Russia three weeks ago, after an extensive tour there. I can truthfully testify that I found there the greatest democracy that the histories have yet to account. But democracy there is unlike our democracy. There the democracy is perpetuated by all the people; in our country it is perpetuated by a small minority of capitalists. The capitalists have the democracy in our country; the workers have the democracy in Soviet Russia.

Any one can speak there any time, anywhere as long as he or she is speaking in favor of the people, who, of course, are the workers and farmers. In our country, the case is just opposite.

Carpenter On Strikes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We read considerable in our daily papers about strikes in various sections of the country involving various industries. It is suggested that these strikes are caused mostly by the radical element in the C. I. O. and to a great extent are not justified. This may be part of the cause for many strikes, but it is not the whole story. Take my own experience for example.

I am an American citizen, born and bred in the United States, and am one of a New England family that sent four sons to answer their country's call during the World War.

I am a carpenter and woodworker by trade, having over 20 years' experience. I have worked for some of the largest building concerns in the East, such as the Casper Ranger Construction Co., Holyoke, Mass.; Fred T. Ley, Springfield, Mass.; Construction Engineering Co., Baltimore, Md., and others. I have a fair knowledge of plans, having attended the Maryland Institute for nearly three years. I studied drafting for a while. Besides that, I have made a study of the steel square and its uses. I have had considerable experience in ship joinery, having worked mostly for the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation in practically all of their yards in Maryland and on all kinds of ships.

I am honest and a conscientious worker. I have applications in several places in Washington for a good job—steady work. But to no avail. The only employment I have been offered is some short job at low pay. All the experience I have had on all the buildings and ships I have worked on counts for nothing.

It is no wonder there are strikes. They take us American workers for fools. They tell us there is a shortage of skilled mechanics, still they don't want to pay much more for a skilled workman who has had from 15 to 20 years' experience, than they do for unskilled labor. If they would pay fair wages they could get help. Give the unemployed employment fair and just wages and there will be fewer strikes—The Communists will not make so much of an impression on American labor.

A Public Defender?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A notice was recently published by the police that they were instituting a "clean up" of crime. What I would like to know, has this purifying of the city any relation to the present overcrowding at Lorton Penitentiary?

The act of herding of men into a cell which creates disease and teaches perversion brings out an ethical query: What is the ratio of guilt between the man incarcerated and society in allowing such conditions to exist?

Another question: are there any men imprisoned for whom all evidence has not been investigated, with the ensuing result that an impartial sentence cannot be pronounced? Justice is due the poor man as well as the rich man, and in order to attain this the office of a public defender should be deliberated upon by Congress.

"Equal justice under law" has a significance; injustice under law vitiates the significance.

Yesterday's "Small Minority."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In his speech Monday Mr. Roosevelt, President of the Americans, said: "The overwhelming majority . . . has little patience with that small minority which vociferates today that prosperity has returned, wages are good, crop prices high and that the Government should take a holiday."

It appears, upon giving free rein to a short memory, that the "small minority" that vociferated the above points prior to election—plus sarcastic aspersions on other "small minorities" with slogans of around-the-corner prosperity as contrasted with its own noble deeds—was none other, Jack Dalton, than the re-election group organized by Mr. Farley, of stamp racket fame, and headed by Mr. Roosevelt. But how election results change political complexions and sincerity! E. G. BARR.

Mention Of Communism In Schools.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In view of the solemn protestation by the public school authorities that nothing has ever entered the public schools, or ever will, which treats communism with favor or support, do you not think the public is entitled to know some of the undeniable matters at variance with such protestation?

"History of Europe: Our Own Times" is still used as a textbook in District of Columbia public schools—Charles A. Beard an author. Chapters 447 and 448 laud Karl Marx and communism as a "great teacher" and "an inspiration" and as constituting "a movement of the working class," in lieu of telling the truth about the infamous conspiracy against everything worth-while in civilization.

This textbook is continued in use, notwithstanding Dr. Ballou admits Beard to be a radical (page 623, House Appropriations Hearings 1937 District of Columbia bill), and has further admitted that "the most insidious and the most dangerous propaganda to combat in the United States has to do with communism" (page 638, same hearings).

"Scholastic" study magazine has been used for more than five years, and is still used. Harold O. Rugg, its social studies editor, is classed by Dr. Ballou himself as a radical (page 624, same hearings). In the issue of October 6, 1934, of said magazine, an article was carried asserting: "For boys and girls communism offers school, hope and adventure." (page 12).

About a month later, in the issue of November 10, 1934, it was asserted editorially that "patriotism" is "childishness and hypocrisy" (page 7). Every informed person knows, of course, that abolition of patriotism is one of the prime objectives of the Communists.

Achorn's so-called "European Civilization and Politics Since 1815" was approved by the board of Education as a textbook in January, 1935 (five months previous to the so-called "Red Rider"). On pages 334 and 335 it seeks to uphold atheism, by praising Darwinism, and rejecting the Bible. Of course, atheism is a leading tenet of communism.

Then, in a chapter commencing on page 483, entitled "Bolshevik Russia" Lenin is glorified, and Soviet Russia is pictured as having solved the problems of mankind. On ecember 18, 1935, the Board of Education eliminated this monstrous textbook, which positively administered the poison of communism, in addition to advocating it; yet the school authorities are now asserting that no one ever had any cause for alarm, because nothing objectionable has ever gained entrance, as they would have us believe.

Is it not more in order for the school authorities to institute a thorough house cleaning than to make light of the well-founded complaints which have been made? Parents and the Nation have rights in this matter.

GEORGE E. SULLIVAN.
Washington, May 26.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of May 15 a letter from a Mr. L. J. Kelley appeals for a continuance of the un-American "red rider." The writer feels impelled to take issue with many of his theories.

What are to many of us the glaring defects and injustices of a system of government may, by the process of trial and error, be so improved that in the course of time it may come to quite closely resemble the American system. Ours, however, is also in a constant change, whether improved or not, as witness the nearly two dozen amendments to our Constitution, and many more awaiting passage. Why shouldn't the Russians throw off the corroded system of nobility under which the masses suffered as serfs for generations and try to improve their lot? The revolutionary heroes to us were a bolshevik curse to the conservative government of George III. It all depends on whose viewpoint you take.

As class after class leave public schools year after year what knowledge could be better for those upon whose shoulders will soon rest the burden of carrying on in the American way than a complete understanding of the many plans of government tried and found to be failures and other peculiar systems now in process of failing in dictatorship-ridden monarchies?

A knowledge of all governments that have failed, brought down to date, is certainly more desirable than a complete ignorance and only an instinct as a guide when in a moment of stress we here in America might be tempted to make innovations that have failed wherever tried.

The action of our Congressmen in this and other legislation to date apparently remains uninfluenced by the radical propaganda which is so often heard in Franklin Park against our public school system which is in the end the best protection our youth can have. L. L. BELL.
Bethesda, Md., May 30.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

F. D. R. And Taxes.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S indignation over tax evasions would be more impressive if he had always had to pay both the Federal and New York State taxes like other citizens of New York and if he had not always enjoyed from the beginning of the Federal tax to the present time the special privilege of an influential politician.

As Governor of New York for four years he was exempt from the Federal tax on a large salary, and as President for the last four years and a bit on a salary of $75,000 a year, plus free rent of a nice house, he has been exempt from the State tax, although he is legally a citizen of the State and receives rather special service from the State government.

Of course, the saving in dollars and cents may be immaterial to a consecrated man, but in that case the sacrifice would be immaterial, too, and the fact remains that he is in the habit of paying one tax where his fellow citizens pay two.

But beyond that point Mr. Roosevelt as Governor and as President has belonged to that group of privileged individuals who do not have to submit to the eavesdropping and spot checking, the prying into individual personal affairs and accounts, which are none of the Government's business that he now bespeaks for ordinary individuals.

To be sure, there is no legal provision that the President shall be immune from the annual review of his items, but nobody can imagine an agent from the Internal Revenue Department descending on him at the White House to demand realistic explanations of every check, personal or otherwise, issued from his book three years ago.

It would be a very foolish reviewer who would require Mr. Roosevelt to dig up his marriage certificate after all these years ere allowing him his $2,500 exemption, in retaliation for something that he might have said or written about reviewing agents. And only an idiot would assess him a little extra just for the sake of appearances, though admitting that his return was absolutely correct.

Yet these experiences are not unknown to persons who may be classified as politically underprivileged, and nobody can deny that the reviewers nowadays are given discretion to allow or disallow legitimate deductions according to the personal inclinations.

If an agent dislikes Jews, Catholics or Methodists the present laws and regulations empower him to harass them with malicious, niggling demands and raise their taxes in the manner of the late Huey P. Long. On the contrary, if he happens to feel like it he can make valuable concessions—a power which creates an opportunity for graft.

• • • •

Mr. Roosevelt's indignation would be more impressive, too, if he had not lately had social relations with Seymour Weiss, of New Orleans, who was Huey Long's collector and treasurer and was indicted for alleged violation of the income tax law while Huey was alive but exonerated by the Department of Justice after Huey's death and the political reconciliation commonly known in Washington as the Second Louisiana Purchase.

The Treasury prepared a case against Mr. Weiss at a time when Huey was giving the Administration great discomfort in Louisiana and in the Senate, and there is no doubt that the indictment was a source of cheer to the patriots in the Administraion.

A cynic might incline to the suspicion that Mr. Weiss was indicted as a political reprisal and exonerated as a political bludgeon whether it was used as such in Seymour's case or not.

But no more cynical cynics are to be found anywhere than those in Washington who admit that in the case of Al Capone the income tax was used to punish a man for murder, arson and riding a bicycle on the sidewalk and that his sentence of 11 years was, in effect, a lynching.

In another case, under this or some future Administration, the same principle might send a man to Alcatraz for 11 years for a small violation of the income tax law and a large opposition to the President. The case of Seymour Weiss, now the friend of the Administration and exonerated of wrongdoing, conveys the idea.

Black Widow Legend.

A Kansas City doctor takes most of the venom out of the black widow spider's bite. "They are not so deadly," he says. "Their bite is seldom fatal—and then usually more from the treatment of fright than anything else."

Come to think of it we don't recall that we ever knew of anybody being actually bitten to death by a black widow. We can't find in the accident prevention movement any mention of a black widow spider bite problem. The National Safety Council which makes a specialty of collecting accidents never mentions the black widow spider bite. It doesn't mention any kind of insect bites or snake bites either for that matter in its grand assortment of burns, falls, drownings, shootings, poisonings, etc. If there is such a thing it just lumps them unimportantly under "all other," which is the same thing in accident statistics as sundries in the household budget.

That seems odd, too. Considering the wide distribution of the black widow and reports of her venomous temper it would seem as though people ought to be dropping right and left from her bite. Evidently there is more of legend than of authentic experience about the black widow.

The legend perhaps grows out of the aversion of the human race for spiders of all kinds, an aversion second only to its dislike and fear of snakes. It would be interesting to know the origin of the antipathy to this marvelous little engineer. It isn't a part of our inheritance from Eve for there don't appear to have been any spiders in the garden of Eden. At least if there were they left our grandparents alone and never got into the story.

A Mid-Week Review of Current Publications

Patterned Humanity

By A. A. Hoehling 3d

FROM the day that the vapid Kerensky government was overthrown in Russia and Lenin marched upon the scene to create the first communistic state the world had known, writers from almost every walk of life began to descend on this new-old country, poke about its cities, its farmlands, sniff at the strange infant dogmas and Utopian philosophies and then returned home to write about the "real" Russia. There were those, as well, who never approached any nearer to Russia than the easternmost avenues of Brooklyn.

But all, whether they were for or against Russia and communism, whether they had been to Russia or not, wrote their "authentic" treatises with great fervor, and flung them at the public, chuckling to themselves, "here is the goods—here at last is the truth."

THE result—we have a library of prejudices and facts, hates and loves, truths and downright lies, and all inextricably jumbled. Thus, it was with little hope of arriving any nearer the solution of the Russian question that this reviewer rolled up his sleeves and plunged into these two latest volumes on the U. S. S. R.

When the final pages had been turned, the reviewer suddenly realized, mirabile dictu, that he had actually found the answer to one important question. The character of the two books is different; the authors are men from a different strata; one is an intellectual and a dreamer, the other an analytical realist, yet they arrive jointly at one conclusion. They tell us, in unmistakable tones that "Humanity" cannot "Be Made to Order," and, as hard as the Russian commissars and the army and the secret police may try, whether with guns or edicts, or ranting exhortations, they cannot suppress or alter any of nature's basic laws.

BOTH writers give example after example which lead irrefutably to the above conclusion. Stekoll, a former Communist of the terrorist variety, the analytical realist, goes into some detail to build up his case, to demonstrate the colossal failure of a patterned humanity.

There are the farmers who refused to be collectivized. Rather than give their grain and their cattle to the government they destroyed all but a very little for themselves. What happened? The government took it anyway. What then? Several million Russians starved to death, but not in vain. The highly complex government in Moscow saw its mistake and established the kolzhoz farm, wherein the natural desire for personal profit was recognized, and the farmers were permitted to sell the fruits of their toil to the state, in much the same way as any capitalist farmer would do. The factory worker and the small shop owner were allowed similar liberty.

There are the million and one domestic-minded men and women who would not let the state deprive them of the joys of home and family. Because of their stubborn resistance, Stalin (who, both Stekoll and Gide agree, is the government) turned back on himself and vigorously stressed the importance of the home. There are the unnumbered hordes of the ecclesiastically minded who desired to worship something other than the dubious ideologies of communism. The result—freedom of religion was guaranteed in the new constitution.

• • • •

ALL these changes, smacking strongly of approved capitalistic practices, Stekoll mentions. Andre Gide, the intellectual and the dreamer, eminent French author and early laudator of Communist Russia, also observes them. His little book is one of profound personal disappointment, and it is natural that it should be. No great man of letters, necessarily liberal, can look with favor upon the narrowing, warping policies of a country which has become so stereotyped that one is forbidden to speak of its destiny without first adding the word "glorious" before "destiny."

Aside from the reversion to natural laws discussed by the two writers, there is an exceedingly disturbing fact, paradoxical to an extent, which seems to indicate that Stalin has succeeded, on the surface at least, in making his "humanity" conform to a certain "order." Both Gide and Stekoll found throughout their travels in Russia, among all the classes of people, in all ages, a maddening smugness, a bland ignorance that any other country "existed," beyond the gates of the U. S. S. R.

With all the pertinent criticisms of the two authors and their keen disappointment, they have not totally lost faith and both conclude on a note similarly optimistic. Says Harry Stekoll:

"Russia . . . by trial and error, is building a new social order under which life will become more secure, more wholesome, and happier."

The Swaggering King

HENRY OF NAVARRE," Marcelle Vioux. Translated by J. Lewis May. (Dutton, $3.50.)

Fittingly, M. Vioux's "Henry of Navarre" opens on that fateful day when Marguerite de Valois was married to the leader of the Huguenots, Henry, King of Navarre. It was another move on the part of that master schemer, Catherine de'Medici, to balance the opposing forces in her kingdom one against another. There was more than dancing and merriment in the palace though, for through the dark streets stole the Duke of Guise, and as Admiral Coligny fell dead the terrible Massacre of Saint Bartholomew began.

It was not a part of Catherine's plan that some 2,000 Protestants should die; her sole idea was to rule France, no matter how. But it was typical of her and the times that murder and torture, violence and rapine ruled the land. What follows is the story of hurried raids by devoted and fanatical bands against the forces of the Queen. An impoverished king of a petty kingdom waged a steady war against overwhelming odds. The only forces in his favor were the devotion of his followers and time, which was surely bringing him nearer the throne of France.

Always he was contending with the wily Catherine, who did everything in her power to convert this obstinate fool to Catholicism. It took the death of her son, Henry III, and four more years of fighting against the Spanish, the Catholic League, and the City of Paris before Henry finally decided that "Paris is well worth a mass." It was not a triumphal entry that he made, but it began the years of his reign and the beginning of reconstruction of France.

France was a wreck. Years of internal struggle had reduced the population to near starvation, the kingship to mere name, and the nation to a nonentity among the other European powers. To the task of restoration two of the most able men in French history addressed themselves, Henry and his minister, Sully.

Henry conceived the policies, Sully attended to the practical problems of administration. The country was rebuilt, taxes were reduced, the legal system was improved, every aspect of the life of the people was the object of the "good king's" attention.

M. Vioux is not concerned with such mundane matters, however. These things he leaves to other, and presumably duller biographies. To list the various affairs he details with such consideration would take more space than this entire review. Suffice it to say that there were many of them ranging from dairy maids to noble ladies. It must be confessed that Henry had a preference for those who were free with their charms. The picture of him living in the Louvre with his Queen and 12 children by 5 different women is a charming one indeed.

He was a reckless, swaggering gallant, with a genius for leadership that arose from his personal magnetism and understanding of men's characters. That he was also a profligate is incidental. To the great task of restoring his kingdom and preparing for the glories of Louis XIV he set himself with unflagging energy. He died on the 14th of May, 1610, at the hands of an assassin when he was setting out on a war against the Hapsburgs that would have strengthened his country to a new greatness.

Japan Is No Postcard Land

Author Shows Practical Side of Living in Tokyo.

By Bett Hooper.

If Japan is to you simply a postcard land bounded on the right by Fujiyama and on the left by, well, Fujiyama, then this book by Katharine Sansom is just what you need. For while it adds substance to your pretty little ideas about the cherry blossom land, it is as lightly and as gracefully done as a print by Fujita.

First of all, the author enters into the cockle-warming subject of the servant problem and that's enough to make everybody feel at home right off. She thinks they're the ideal servants. In fact, one is apt to find them altogether too anxious to please. They like to be taken into their employer's confidence. After they once get the lowdown on your habits there's no changing either them or the habits. You get your tea every day at a certain hour whether you want it or not; your buttons are sewed on almost before they hit the floor; and they're actually hurt if you perform some little service for yourself rather than going through the difficult process of explaining to them exactly how you want it done. Perhaps the best part of it all is that they seem to have a sort of sixth sense which enables them to anticipate your wishes. This must be especially gratifying in cases where one's only command of the Japanese language consists of monosyllables such as yes or no or rice.

As a matter of fact, the word rice doesn't play as big a part on the menu in Japan as the average person thinks. There are soups which do credit to Henri; fish marvels of some indeterminate flavoring; abundant game and as many different kinds of vegetables as there are in a seed catalogue. Milk, strangely enough, is a rarity. At one time, milk drinking in Tokyo became a fad and it was considered quite chic to meet one's friends in a "milk-hall" for a drink. The chief difficulty the American encounters when dining in a Japanese restaurant is to get food that is hot. There's a lukewarm quality to the whole meal which is, to say the least, extremely annoying to the diner who is accumstomed to having his peas porridge hot. But with all due respect to the author, this can hardly be called a situation peculiar to Japan.

The politeness for which the Japanese are famous is no mere legend. The bus conductor is usually a woman and she not only thanks you for buying your ticket but sees to it that you do not leave parcels on the seat, sleep beyond your station, or leave her bus without a little decorous bow.

Almost without your realizing it, Mrs. Sansom has given you the answers to the question which she is asked most often, "What is it like to live in Tokyo?" Without once adopting the pontifical tone of the travel lecturer, she nevertheless manages to hit on nearly every phase of life among the Japanese Babbits. And it is no one-sided picture which she draws but a triptych showing on the one side the Japanese, on the other the foreigner in Japan, and in the center the common meeting ground between them. And suddenly it comes to you that Main street is the same the world over regardless of whether the meeting place on the corner is a drug store or a tea house.

I don't know just why, but it surprised me to find that the Japanese loves his little joke. Wisecracking with your servants in Tokyo is one sure way of keeping them satisfied. The author's husband remarked one summer that, "rather than pay the price asked for a new sampan to sail the lake in, he himself should be paid that sum for taking it off the boatbuilder's hands." And, says Mrs. Sansom, "The happy village passed the joke round, so that youths fell off bicycles to bow delightedly to us, and local fishermen far up the trout-stream greeted us as such renowned wits that we must be renowned fishermen also."

Dr. Walter Pitkin would be in his seventh heaven in Japan. For there the people grow old more gracefully than in any other nation. One might easily imagine that life begins for them at 70 after observing the creamy-bronze skin, the kindly eyes, the figure "running to lean rather than fat" and the general air of calm which is characteristic of the aged in that land. When youths, they are up at the break of day practicing fencing or jujitsu; studying for entrance into one of the schools; looking about for a livelihood; and learning to master their own language. The last achievement results in about 80 per cent of Japanese students and school boys wearing spectacles.

Emily Post, also, would get a nice, ladylike kick out of living in Tokyo. Dinner parties, garden parties, weddings and other festivities are carefully planned down to the last minute detail. If Elsa Maxwell runs out of ideas, she might try giving a typical Japanese garden party which consists of fishing in artificial lakes in formal dress, even to top hats. The procedure smacks a little of Hollywood—attendants attach the bait and remove the catch, row you about and point out likely places for a good catch—all in the grand manner.

On the other hand, perhaps it would be just as well if Mrs. Post didn't make the trip. For the etiquette of public bathing still remains a subject on which she has not yet handed down a decree.

The book costs $5, but even this seems extremely reasonable in view of the vast amount of information derived from it; the thoroughly delightful way in which it is written; and the 40 plates which accompany the text. These are executed by Marjorie Nishiwaki and though some people consider it heresy to mutilate a book, I intend having at least ten of them framed for my room. They're exactly in keeping with Mrs. Sansom's text—authentic and amusing.

A First Novel

"THE TREE HAS ROOTS," by Mary Jane Ward. (E. P. Dutton, $2.50.)

This is a novel about college, but nobody gets herself tripped up in a daisy chain; nobody attends that most brutal of indoor sports—a sorority rush tea; nobody flunks a course or writes to father for a check; nobody gets all wet going out for crew. Instead, they rake leaves, tend furnaces, sling hash and everlastingly type letters for rah-rah promotional managers who die for Dear Old Stuff in a comfortable swivel chair in a cozy office.

To get a "first" novel published, you have to be different, and that is what Mary Jane Ward, the author of "The Tree Has Roots," has been. Instead of the usual approach to a story of college life, Miss Ward has substituted one that will give the reader pause for 315 pages.

She has taken for her characters the people who work behind the scenes—the people who, as employes and not as students, make the wheels grind round. There is Mary, the waitress, who finds her job in the school restaurant is not all skittles and potato salad; Mr. Normith, the repairman, who has seen better days, but is content to put up with worse ones; Miss Dobbs, the secretary, who makes one wild and futile attempt to get out of life what she thinks she has missed; Craig, the good-for-nothing-at-all janitor; Mr. Grimes, the superintendent of buildings and grounds who at last gets up enough courage to fire himself from a job without a future, and Mr., Miss and Mrs. So Forth and So On.

Their comings and goings and emotions are set down clearly, dispassionately and realistically. There is no fooling and nothing fancy. It is as is. Each character stands out in hard relief against the ivy-walled background and each shows that the author knows whereof and whereabouts she speaks.

The climax revolves around a blaze which destroys the old college chapel, last eyesore of a modern and pushing Midwestern institution. Craig, discontented and egged on by a fly-by-night Communist, is the guilty one, but he is never found out.

If you have any illusions about college life, prepare to shed them now. "The Tree Has Roots" is a forthright expose of the academic undercrust and it will hold your attention straight through.

Prose Poems

"Quiet Corner," by Patience Strong, is a collection of 56 brief prose poems. Some few lines and a few of her analogies are of passable poetic quality; however, these are indeed few.

For the most part, she interprets with overflowing sentiment the things with which women are traditionally concerned. To her, the woman's world is a quiet corner with many hidden significances, to paraphase, she sees:

. . . sermons in homes
And poems in ironing clothes.

Ivy Towers

"TOWERS WITH IVY," by Minnie Hite Moody. (Messner, $2.50.)

The village was agog over the wedding of its foremost citizen. Young, handsome and rich, Josiah Winfield had done much for the little Ohio town; he built and owned the stone bank, he erected the frame schoolhouse and he helped to build the canal and bring the railroad within 30 miles of the village. Two presidents, Jackson and Van Buren had recognized his importance as a financier.

The people didn't altogether approve of Josiah. The big walnut house just finished for his bride, they considered wanton extravagance. The villagers didn't think much of Josiah's dream either. The wilderness was no place for a college, but already the hill had been cleared of trees and two ugly, frame buildings marked the beginnings. Josiah told Amarila on their wedding night of his plan for more buildings of brick, a conservatory of music. He didn't mention that the bank closed for the past week, had no immediate prospects of reopening. Morning would be time enough. But by morning Josiah was dead, shot by a crazed man whose hard-earned savings were in the bank.

Little Wing Winfield was 3 months old when his mother died and it was for him and his descendants to watch the college succeed in spite of a series of depressions, until finally a great university stood where once there were two frame buildings. The Winfields, much depleted financially, continued to live in the old walnut house. It had become a landmark that fathers pointed out to their sons. The two Winfield girls, so-called even when in their 60's, attended every graduation, sitting in the exact same seats. They, too, had become part of the tradition of the place.

"Towers With Ivy" is a charming narrative of four generations. After Mrs. Moody's delightful presentation of timid and obedient ladies and dominant and bearded men amid old-time manners and customs, the final co-educational transition of the university, with the great granddaughter of the first Amarila actually a student seemed almost impossible progress even for 1933.

Hobo Life

"THE OTHER HALF," by John Worby. (Lee Furman, Inc., $2.50.)

The most interesting part of "The Other Half" is the glossary of hobo slang which is included. The most disturbing thing about the book is the calm superiority of Hobo Worby, who seems to feel very much above the working men and women whose bounty he collects with such ease.

In England, where this book was published first, an agitation to have it banned undoubtedly won it many readers who would otherwise have ignored it. Let us hope nobody will start such propaganda here "The Other Half" is disgustingly frank about love in the hobo jungle; the amours it delineates are as shoddy as the grimy costumes its chafacters wear. It doesn't deserve reading.

DAN TERRELL.

'Painter of the Soul'

By Elisabeth E. Poe

IN 13 years the 100th anniversary of the death of Edgar Allen Poe, master American poet, will be celebrated. It is certain that Poe will pass successfully the test set by Mark Twain for literary immortality: "To be remembered after 100 years," declared the sage of Missouri, "is the surest test of literary fame."

And this, it might be remarked in passing, will be in spite of the motley crew of Poe biographers who, with only a few notable exceptions, have been limited in their understanding of the character of Poe or else deliberate defamers of his reputation.

Poe has suffered more from these voluntary interpreters of his genius than have most poets. The trend began with that first biographer of his, the infamous Griswold, who waited until the poet's death to pen his poisoned opinions of his career. It has been continued by biographers here and there even unto the present day.

• • • •

POE'S latest biographer is Mr. Edward Shanks, who has published what is called "a critical biography" of Poe. The biographer is an Englishman, a poet himself and a writer of fiction. He has indulged some of his ability in fiction writing in his present biography of Poe. For he has adopted several of the current fictions about Poe and printed them as facts. It is too bad because Mr. Shanks could have done a better job; he has the ability; even if he did not exercise it overmuch in the present instance.

Out of Poe's own works and the known facts of his life his present biographer could have evolved a better volume than by leaning so heavily on the American biographers of Poe. Even such a painstaking one as Hervey Allen, who in "Israfel" lost himself in a sea of words when writing of the poet who, more than any other, writing in English, understood the exact value of words.

It is pleasant to be able to agree with Mr. Shanks in the verdict that the best edition of Poe's works—and its accompanying biography this critic ventures to add—is that of the late Prof. James A. Harrison, of the University of Virginia. This editor and critic approached his task without prejudice and the long research and undoubted scholarship needed for such an understanding. One echoes the lament of Mr. Shanks in his preface that "it seems astonishing that there should be no Americans to do for Poe what, for example, Buxton Forman did for Keats, Earle Welby and Stephew Wheeler for Landor or Mr. E. V. Lucas for Lamb." Yea, verily!

• • • •

MR. SHANKS appears to have fallen into the common pit of Poe biographers in that he is impressed more with what Poe did in his lifetime or what happened to him than with what he wrote. For, gazing at his life in retrospect, how utterly vain it seems to walk in the footsteps of so many Poe biographers and bring into bas relief his mortal weaknesses or even to overemphasize the disaster which "followed fast and followed faster" at his heels. As a poet himself Mr. Shanks, I feel sure, would choose to be judged by his writings than by incidents in his life, no matter how fortunate.

To sum it all up, Poe was a star child, a child of destiny. Song-haunted and woe-driven, his few years—as men measure Time—were a pilgrimage of sorrow on the road to the Altar of the Beautiful.

The sensitive soul of Edgar Allan Poe is now beyond all mortal hurt. Neither the praise nor the censure of man can bruise his spirit or lure him from the eternal verities. Truly, he "hath outsoared the shadow of our night." In some Valhalla of poet souls he strays, dreaming his high dreams among the lilied fields of Virgil's Paradise.

• • • •

MR. SHANKS speaks truly when he declares that "Poe proclaimed the divine right of the poet to follow his own ideals and the divine superiority of the poet over the mob." Poe never sold the literary truth to serve the hour, although at times he was forced by circumstances to sell his immortal verse for a mere pittance.

England contributed much to Edgar Allan Poe in literary stability, the scholarship that distinguished his works and in prompt recognition of his genius. This debt has not been added to greatly by Mr. Shanks' book, although his obvious sincerity is to be commended.

Novels on Family Life

"NEVER SAY GOODBYE," by Julia Truitt Yenni. (Reynal & Hitchcock, $2.)

Laid in deep southern Louisiana is the story of a gayly interesting family seen through the eyes of Chlo, the third youngest of eight children. The medium used is a difficult one for recounting events, because the telling either leans too much on the childish side, presenting to the adult reader an infantile aspect, or else it is too self-consciously adult to be consistent.

"Never Say Goodbye" has been handled deftly, however, with smooth transitions from impersonal narration to Chlo's thoughts, and back again. The understanding of the tremendous things with which children cope quite simply and, contrariwise, the situations which puzzle them, is deep and warm. Chlo's lack of reaction to May's death until a day when she turns eagerly to tell the dead sister about a neighbor's new baby is a powerful illustration of this comprehension.

Blustering and pompous Papa, understanding and lovely Mamma are the parental background, while the children from Angela through Harry, Sis, Jenny, to little Lucy and baby Bud, fight through their childish quarrels and older love affairs.

Because Chlo's family and the neighbors who share their lives in the small community comprise her whole world, all the happenings of their lives excite Chlo and, in turn, the reader. Julia Yenni has successfully written a book that never anticipates a line or a chapter; which after all, is just the way a child meets life.

RAE LEWIS.

"IN THE LIVES OF MEN," by Alan Hart. (Norton, $2.50.)

Dr. Alan Hart has chosen the Northwest for the background of his new novel. He intermixes the imaginary happenings of his story with what now is history. The City of Fairharbor has its boom days and its depressions during the days of the Spanish-American War, the Chicago earthquake and the Klondike gold rush.

Dr. Hart either has an aversion to women or he does not understand them. His women characters are all either unpleasant or they are nonentities. Mrs. Winforth is steadily disagreeable and Caroline is blankly hard.

Although Dr. Hart's novel appears to be written with such haste that at times it sounds like a synopsis of itself, and, although his is often the style of the newspaper reporter, he cannot escape his physician's heritage. Doctors have their characters molded by the same influences until their type becomes almost a pattern. Their imaginations are awakened, their intellects are kept keen by their daily contact with the inscrutable forces of life and death. In constant contact with what is stupid or pitiful or noble, the physician becomes an interpreter of human nature. His office hours are full of fine novel material, and of such is "In the Lives of Men."

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Husband Writes Rhyme in Praise of Other Women, None for Wife of 23 Years; She's Jealous.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I have decided to settle a family argument by getting your opinion. First, I'll tell my side. Then he'll tell his. To begin: He was guest at a stag party recently. The host served a dish for which he is celebrated, and the 15-year-old daughter of the house had baked and iced a cake. My husband thought she wasn't sufficiently praised, as most of the compliments went to the other dish. So he wrote a poem of appreciation. He composed three stanzas and passed these around among the women in his office for criticism. It was the consensus of opinion that they were rather deep for a youngster and he wrote another of four lines, which he sent. Then he showed me the copies. It was my opinion he should have destroyed the first effort and not written any more.

Previous to this he had saved coupons for another young woman. He would put these coupons in her mail box with a little poem enclosed. I didn't know he was doing this until one afternoon when we had a caller and the subject of poetry came up. He got out a little ditty and read it. There was some complimentary reference to her eyes. I got up and left the room. The green-eyed monster was at work. I stayed out for some time. Finally it dawned on him that I was displeased about something and he asked what was wrong. Apparently it hadn't occurred to him that I was jealous until I told him.

* * * *

I don't recall his having written any poems to me in the 23 years and more that we have been married. We live on a farm and I look pretty shabby much of the time, partly from necessity and, possibly, partly from negligence. But he says he loves me just the same no matter how I look, and it is easy to believe, for I feel the same about him. Do you think I am narrow-minded to object to his poetic flights? He thinks I am. WORRIED.

* * * *

The Hsuband's Side.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The chance to defend myself is irresistible. I married my wife because I loved her. I still love her and will continue to love her unless she does something more destructive than just being jealous—though I confess I have had my fill of that. My only criticism of her is that she hates heirlooms and has given away or left behind (when moving) a considerable collection of relics that had been in my family more than 100 years.

* * * *

But to come back to the point. I was one of four neighbor boys who grew up together and we have remained as close as blood brothers to this day. This association is very dear to me, though my wife dislikes the very idea of it, for no reason that I have been able to elicit. Each year we have a stag party, taking turns as hosts. This year, the host served clam chowder, which he has a secre formula for making. (It was good, all right; but my wife can make better, having learned from my grandfather, a transplanted Scotchman). The daughter of the house went to great pains to bake and frost a cake which disappeared without comment. I merely wanted to encourage her a little; that was all . . .

* * * *

As for the instance of the coupons, the young lady happened to be a casual acquaintance who could talk facts with a harassed though cheerfully devoted family man . . . She was saving coupons and as a matter of accommodation I collected what I could and passed them on with a bit of doggerel rhyme . . . It was merest accident that I happened to have a sample at hand, I don't make a habit of saving the stuff.

WORRIED'S HUSBAND.

What to Believe.

DEAR CORRESPONDENTS: Here is an apt illustration of the old saying, "To understand all is to forgive all." With both sides of the story told, it is easy to understand and forgive the wife's involuntary (though tactless) disclosure of frightened heartache; and to understand and forgive the husband who, without the slightest thought or intention of implying unfavorable comparison, exercised his versifying knack by inditing verses to other women, while neglecting to direct even an occasional rhymed tribute to his wife.

* * * *

However, if the wife has failed in angelic understanding, certainly the husband has failed in true thoughtfulness. Of the two, I believe the husband is a trifle the more at fault. In view of the fact that half a life time's devotion has not brought her so much as a couplet, one can't really blame the wife for getting a trifle jittery on learning that her husband sings rhymed praises of other ladies' accomplishments or charms. How is she to know that he is too self-conscious to step out of the role of "harassed family man" when in the bosom of his family? Few wives realize that the head of the house has several masks: one for "the boys," another for the home, and still another for the world of men and women outside the home. And few husbands know that the way to keep a wife's potential jealousy in absolute abeyance is to treat her as though she were a combination Minerva and Helen of Troy. For every compliment he pays another woman, he should pay at least two to his wife.

* * * *

It's age-old instinct which makes wives resent their husbands' pre-marital stag friendships. There's nothing personal or specific about the feeling, as a rule. Tied down as they are by child bearing and rearing and the inescapable routine of home-making, wives aspire to keep their husbands in the same closed circle of domesticity. They view with distrust any affiliation which might cause them to revert, even in fancy and for the briefest time, to an illusion of carefree bachelorhood. Happily, there are many women clever enough to disguise their feeling in this regard; but I daresay all who love their home and husband experience it at times.

* * * *

In this case I advise the wife to rout negligence and take more pains with her appearance; and the husband to put his versifying talent to work in praise of his wife. Nothing puts a wife more on her mettle to be in all ways admirable than a frequent well-turned compliment.

Cotton Goes Formal for Summer Evenings

Here is a dance frock with a lot of swing and style, fashioned of muslin in a soft Persian print. The flaring skirt accenting the molded bodice is finished at the hemline and waistline with wide bands of grosgrain ribbon; the sash reaches to the bottom of the skirt. The square neck and quaintly puffed sleeves enhance the styling.

Sheer Materials Deemed Better Choice by Many.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

IN SPITE OF the mixed riot of color, flaunted pattern and unique fabric treatment, nothing demonstrates the dramatic new uses of cotton better than the formal frocks with billowing skirts that sway gracefully from snug-fitting bodices. With cottons entering the summer night life there are endless fashion possibilities for smart and cool dance frocks. You can plan your entire summer evening wardrobe in cottons, from the sheer and dainty interpretations to the sturdier piques and novelty weaves.

The type of cotton material chosen determines the styling. For the sleek and streamlined evening gowns the fabric needs to have a firm texture, such as the piques and some of the muslins. For the Southern belle influence, which has become quite popular in many sections of the country, sheer cotton materials are the better choice. Cotton laces and nets also fashion many of the more feminine-styled dancing frocks.

"Cottony" Cottons Return.

Talcum powder muslins, so called because of their soft texture and gossamer-like sheerness, are appearing in lovely color tones and patterns to lend glamour to the summer evening style scene. Cottony cottons of the type your grandmother wore are much in evidence in quaint patterns and old-fashined color schemes. Crinkled organdy, lawn and lace in the same pattern, dotted swisses, organzas, new looking voiles, all sway to the swing music at summer dancing parties this season.

Nautical designs and bold flower motifs are ideal for the country club dining-dancing affairs. These appear in white and brilliant colors on white or dark backgrounds; the majority are accompanied by bolero jackets, usually in white. Persian and Hindu prints are the mediums for exclusive-looking evening gowns—the Oriental touch which is distinctive in a season of outstanding materials and patterns.

Grosgrain Smart Trimming.

Wide bands of grosgrain ribbon are everywhere as a smart evening gown trimming—they give any cotton frock a chic air. Velvet also trims many of the sheer cotton creations; the contrast between the two textures making for smartness and a more expensive look. Sheer cotton redingotes over silk slips of contrasting color are other dressmaker details which give the cotton evening frock an exclusive character.

Laces and Nets Also Draw Favor for Dance Dresses.

Cotton evening coats come in both brief and full-length models, the choice depending upon the type of cotton evening gown. The three popular lengths in evening gowns, sponsored by both Paris and America, are interpreted in cottons of varying textures and pattern. If you have accepted the ankle-length dancing frock, it is available in cottons as well as sheer silks and regal satins. With the smart styling in cotton evening gowns and the wide variety of texture, color and design from which to choose this summer, there should be no doubt in the mind of anyone that cottons have really arrived as an ultra-smart evening material.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, June 1.

UNTIL May 11, in this year of grace, lady lawyers of our town were forced to sit well below the salt. They were practicing attorneys, and all that, but the legal girls could not become members of the local Bar Association — which is something like toting the Vassar daisy chain.

ALICE HUGHES

On May 11 all this was changed. Our Blackstone baby-dolls, at long last, were invited to enter the charmed circle of male wizards of the law—the latest and greatest triumph of our sex in a strictly male world! Thus May 11, in Gotham annals, will rank with July 4 and other such significant dates in history!

No sooner had this classic decree been promulgated (quite naturally) than the cream of our legal crop asked to be let into the sacrosanct Bar Association. Eight of them were among the first applicants, and of these the most interesting to me was a Miss Susan Brandeis, whose shingle hangs at 39 Broadway, in the very heart of the financial district.

She happens to be the daughter of Louis D. Brandeis, liberal justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. But never mention that to Miss Susan. She loathes trading on the name and fame of her great father. All she asks is to be the law partner of her husband, Jacob Gilbert, and she does very well. And she is so proud and happy about the Bar Association thing! Which she has every right to be.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—A local shop, one of Fifth avenue's finest, bursts out, today, with the American Girl Dress—certainly a large order, and somewhat forward, if you ask me! The frock so honored, as I checked it the other day, is a dark, sheer crepe with a fitted, high-waisted bodice. It is to be worn with dark, tailored accessories . . . And if you don't like the idea, do as you please with your summer clothes . . .

We even have a cooking school here, believe it or not! It has been going on for 17 years, but most of its pupils have been male, studying to be chefs at our big hotels. And what do you think the diploma is? A rolling pin wrapped in cellophane! Wouldn't it be?

Cultivate Social Graces

PRETTY as a picture, a top-notch dancer, yet unpopular! Jane doesn't know that the secret of popularity is to make the other fellow feel good.

"Aw g'wan! You don't mean it," she tittered when Lee said she danced well. Lee feels as dejected as a caterpillar in the rain. Suppose Jane had known the popular girl's trick of saying, "How nice of you to tell me so." Lee would have felt so set up over his gallantry, then and there he'd have asked for a date.

Here are other weaknesses of wallflowers that make perfectly nice men like Lee retreat:

Long silences. A man would rather have you count "rich man, poor man, beggar man . . ." on his coat buttons than make him feel like a dub for not knowing what to say next.

Excessive shyness. He thinks people are saying, "Look at that horrid young brute. He's frightened the poor girl out of her wits."

Attracting too much attention. Loud haw-haws, flamboyant dress and bumptious manner make him yearn to crawl under the table.

Knowing it all? He would like to have it appear that he knows a little, too—perhaps just a shade more than you.

Don't spoil your chances for popularity with blunders like these. Our 40-page booklet, "You Can Be Popular," by a famous psychologist, tells you how to cultivate the traits that win friends. Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Vitamin E Discovery.

Dr. Barnett Sure, who is professor of agricultural chemistry at the University of Arkansas, and who was the independent discoverer of vitamin E, has written a book called "The Little Things in Life," in which he discusses such things as vitamins, minerals and the ductless glands. Since he worked so much on vitamin E, which is not very well known to my readers, let us turn to what he says on the subject.

In 1919, while he was engaged in studies with rats on the nutritional value of milk proteins, he noticed that on a diet which had about 10 per cent of total milk proteins, good growth was obtained, but female rats, although they gave birth to healthy young, failed to rear them. It was thought that all the known vitamins were amply provided for in this ration and also all the mineral elements.

The diet was changed back and forth several times without improving the situation. In other words, a diet which was complete in protein, carbohydrates and fat, and all known minerals and vitamins A, B, C and D, still was lacking in some substance which had to do with fertility in the male and this curious inability of the female to rear her brood.

Search was made through many food articles to find what this could be. Finally, in 1922, it was learned that the addition of a plant material from a single source, such as the Georgia velvetbean pod meal, rice, corn or oats, always resulted in fertility.

In these foods and in many others, this substance, which has been called vitamin E, occurs apparently in two forms—one element which is essential for fertility, and the other which is indispensable for milk secretion. It is known that on diets deficient in vitamin E the females may become pregnant and the embryos apparently develop naturally to the fifth day. They may even develop until the fifteenth day, but ultimately they die and are absorbed by the mother. To show how powerful and specific the action of the vitamin is, if it is added to the diet on the fifth day, the mother will produce a healthy litter.

Among the vegetable and fruit oils in which vitamin E is found are wheat-germ oil, cotton-seed oil, crude corn-oil, palm-oil, peach-kernel, soybean, peanut and olive oil.

As a practical form of treatment, it has been found by Poulson that a number of women have been cured of habitual miscarriage by the use of vitamin E during pregnancy.

Editor's note—Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending ten cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope, stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of The Washington Post. The pamphlets are "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "Care of the Hair and Skin."

Baltimore Woman Wins Prize For Claret Jelly Sandwiches

Other Recipes Submitted in Post Contes t Presented; Originality and New Shapes Add Zest to Festive Fare.

By Rebekah Blake.

FANCY tea sandwiches make their most prominent appearance at this time of year when wedding and graduation festivities are in order and garden parties and teas are popular.

Tea sandwiches vary in shape and style, but they must be small, interesting and savory. Original hostesses make up new ideas for these snacks so they never become monotonous or ordinary.

Clever ideas were submitted in The Post Recipe Contest for tea sandwiches. These included ginger and nut sandwiches, anchovy, shrimp and butter, deviled egg and ham, chicken salad, puff paste, strawberry and cream cheese, asparagus rolled sandwiches and many other such interesting suggestions.

The first prize for this contest, $3, was won by Mrs. T. S. Tolar, 700 Park avenue, Baltimore, Md., for her recipe for Claret Jelly Sandwiches.

The second prize, $2, went to Mrs. Arthur Wotier, 1722 C street northeast, Washington, D. C., for her recipe for Tower of Babel Sandwiches; the third prize, $1, was awarded to Mrs. Glenn Willett, 1016 Sixteenth street northwest, for her recipe for Dream Sandwiches, and Mrs. Frank E. Edwards, Capitol Heights, Md., won the fourth prize, also $1, for her recipe for Heavenly Sandwiches. The fifth prize, $1, went to Mrs. Grace Wynn, 1333 Belmont street northwest, for her recipe for Ginger Sandwiches.

Here is Mrs. Tolar's recipe:

Claret Jelly Sandwiches.

1 box gelatin (2 ounces)
1 cup cold water
1 cup hot water
1 cup sugar
1½ cups claret
¼ cup lemon juice
1 cup whipping cream
½ cup English walnuts and almonds
1 sponge cake, large

Soak the gelatin in cold water and dissolve in hot. Add sugar and strain. When cold, add claret and lemon juice. Mold in sheets ⅜ inch deep in a wet pan.

Slice nuts very thin and stir into stiffly whipped cream. From thin slices of sponge cake cut fancy shapes. With same cutters stamp out jelly shapes. Spread cakes with cream and nuts and cover with jelly shapes.

Mrs. Wotier's recipe:

Tower of Babel.

Arrange a variety of small thin sandwiches in a pyramid, using different kinds of bread. Garnish around the base with cress and radish roses and top with celery plumes. Suggested fillings: Avocado pear mashed with a few drops of onion juice and French dressing on nut bread. Grated cheese and little chopped celery and mayonnaise on rye bread. Grated cucumber and little minced green pepper and onion juice on white bread. Cream cheese on one slice and bits of cooked beets on the other buttered slice on cracked wheat bread. Anchovies, small pickles and chives chopped on whole-wheat bread. Chopped candied fruits moistened with wine on graham bread.

Mrs. Willett's recipe follows:

Dream Sandwiches.

Grate a bowl of American cheese. Place two tablespoonfuls on a slice of white bread, sprinkle with paprika, spread, cover with another slice and press firmly together. Cut across both ways, making four small sandwiches out of each large one. Fry in hot butter in a chafing dish and serve with very finely chopped apples and celery mixed with mayonnaise.

Here is Mrs. Wynn's recipe:

Ginger Sandwiches.

Moisten cream cheese with fresh lemon juice; add a small quantity of chopped nuts and chopped seedless raisins. To this mixture add a large quantity of chopped ginger root (preserved). Butter thin slices of whole-wheat bread and spread with ginger mixture.

First Lady Plans Talks, Luncheons

Will Attend Democrat Dinner on Tuesday in Syracuse.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Luncheons and lectures, punctuated with brief trips to New York, New Jersey, and North Carolina, will mark Mrs. Roosevelt's calendar for the next few days.

Last evening, Mrs. Roosevelt was a member of a party visiting the Shoreham Terrace especially to see Roberta Jonay, of New York, dance again. Miss Jonay was one of the featured entertainers at the recent party for the Fourth Estate at the White House.

Mrs. Roosevelt also seemed to enjoy the other headliners on the Terrace program last evening—particularly Marian Wilkins and Jack Waltzes, the dance team that has attracted no end of "big name" visitors to the Terrace, including Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, who hails from the same part of the country as Miss Wilkins, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, Mr. Anning Prall, Senator and Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, and Mr. J. F. T. O'Connor—all of whom were present Monday evening.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock Mrs. Roosevelt will take the women of the press on a tour to inspect the Resettlement Administration Project at Greenbelt, Md. She will leave this evening for New York, and will go from there to Newark, N. J. tomorrow to deliver a lecture at noon. On Friday, she will attend commencement exercises at the Todhunter School in New York.

Next Tuesday she will go to Syracuse to be present at the dinner of the women's division of the State Democratic Committee in New York. On Thursday she will return to Washington and will leave that evening for North Carolina to visit the Penderlea homestead projects there, and to attend the annual strawberry festival scheduled in Wallace, N. C., for that date. Returning to Washington, on June 12, she will hold her next press conference on Monday, June 14.

Yesterday, immediately following her press conference, she was guest of honor at a luncheon of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. In the evening she delivered her regular weekly broadcast.

As is the custom at the First Lady's press conferences, Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday answered a variety of questions, ranging all the way from whether she believes a woman should be appointed to the Supreme Court to hymns that will be played at the wedding of her son, Franklin, jr., to Miss Ethel duPont on June 30.

The First Lady sees no reason why a woman should not be appointed to the Supreme Court if she is outstandingly suited for the position. She said yesterday, "the important thing is to get persons—men or women—of fitness for this high post."

Neither the President nor Mrs. Roosevelt has been consulted as to the music to be played at the Roosevelt-duPont wedding, according to the First Lady. Asked whether it was true that the President had made a request that his two favorite hymns be played, she said she did not believe he had only two favorites, and she was very sure he had neither been consulted, nor had made any suggestions along this line.

His parents will not be present when Franklin, jr., is graduated from Harvard this month. Mrs. Roosevelt said her son had announced he did not care to have his family attend.

Questioned as to her reaction to the present Spanish situation, the First Lady would only say "it seems very serious."

Miss Hilda Smith, specialist in adult education of the WPA, was a guest at the conference and explained her work.

The Minister of Norway, Mr. Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, went to New York yesterday to attend a banquet which was given last evening by the Norwegian-American Chamber of Commerce, and the Norwegian Club of New York, in honor of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, newly appointed United States Minister to Norway. He will return to Washington today.

Marriage of Representative's Daughter Is Solemnized at Christ Church in Alexandria; First of June Weddings.

The procession of brides is on. Among those who walked down the aisle to the strains of Lohengrin on the first evening of the "month of brides" was Miss Ida Elizabeth Cannon, who was married to Mr. William Irwin Pixley in the historic Christ Church in Alexandria last night at 8:30 o'clock.

The bride, who is the daughter of Representative and Mrs. Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, was given in marriage by her father. The Rev. Harry Lee Doll, rector of Christ Church, and the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, officiated.

The bride chose for her gown rich white satin cut on princess lines, with a deep V-neckline. The bodice was full with quilted puffed shoulders, and close-fitting sleeves ending in points at the wrists. The gown buttoned down the back and ended in a full flowing train. The bride wore a Juliet cap of seed pearls with an open crown, and a scalloped face veil which was two-tiered in the back. She carried a shower bouquet of white orchids, white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Ruby Melinda Cannon, sister of the bride, was the only attendant and she chose for her costume white mousseline-de-soie over white taffeta. The shoulders of her frock were quilted and puffed, and the sleeves short. Her bouquet was of pink rosebuds tied with aqua ribbon.

Ensign William Randolph Peeler, U. S. N., of Norfolk, Va., was the best man, and Mr. John C. Brown, jr., and Mr. George Y. Harvey, both of Washington, were ushers.

A reception was held following the ceremony at the Hotel George Mason in Alexandria.

Mrs. Pixley attended the University of Missouri and holds the degrees of bachelor of journalism and master of arts. She is a member of Alpha Phi and Theta Sigma Phi sororities.

Mr. Kirkland, Miss Kramer Are Married

Couple Will Live at Shepherd Garden After Trip.

Miss Katherine L. Kramer, daughter of Mrs. Stephen Elliott Kramer and the late Dr. Stephen Elliott Kramer, former first assistant superintendent of public schools, was married to Mr. James Robert Kirkland, son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Kirkland, of Washington. The wedding took place last evening in St. Stephen and the Incarnation Episcopal Church, the Rev. Franklin Johns Bohanan officiating. Preceding the ceremony, Mr. William F. Raymond sang, accompanied by Mr. S. J. Kreugburg, who also played the wedding music. The church was decorated with palms and ferns and spring flowers on the altar.

Ivory Satin Gown.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Dr. Stephen Elliott Kramer, jr., and her gown was of ivory satin, fashioned with a long coat, the graceful skirt of which formed a sweeping train. Her veil was of rare Brussels lace and was arranged on a bandeau of flowers. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley tied with white ribbons.

Miss Sarah Louise Kramer was her sister's maid of honor, wearing a gown of yellow lace over taffeta with a wreath of flowers in her hair, and her bouquet was of colorful spring flowers. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Stephen Elliott Kramer, jr., Miss Constance Kramer, Miss Elizabeth Peeples, and Miss Marian Boyle.

Bridesmaids' Costumes.

They wore gowns of acquamarine lace over taffeta and wreaths of flowers in their hair. Their bouquets were similiar to that carried by the maid of honor.

Mr. Richard J. Kirkland was best man for his cousin and the ushers were Mr. Robert T. Kirkland, cousin of the bridegroom, Mr. L. H. Dishman, Mr. Edward H. Libbey and Mr. John Kramer Sasnett, cousin of the bride.

Mrs. Roosevelt Assails 'Fear' in Club Speech

D. C. Federation Hears First Lady Attack Tendency to Be Afraid 'of Each Other; of What Someone, We Ourselves, Might Do.'

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

A plea for a struggle against the general attitude of fear was made by Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday in her address before the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs at its annual luncheon at the Mayflower. Taking "Youth" as her subject, she discussed the attitude of older people as it affects the problems of the younger generation.

"As we look back to see what we have done and its results in the past, we shall find the worst results have come from fear," Mrs. Roosevelt declared, "fear of each other; of what someone else may do; of what we ourselves might do under given circumstances."

She decried the tendency of speakers to point out "what we have to fear—that the attitude of youth today is a dangerous attitude—and fear of the influences preying on youth."

"I am beginning to think that attitude is one of the things we older people need most to fight," she asserted. "If we are afraid of what may happen because of this or that influence, our whole way of living will be governed by fear—and things done under the impulse of fear are never the wise things but always the regrettable ones."

"We need to think not in terms of what will make life easier for us but for the future—to look ahead 10 or 15 years from now. The future belongs to the youth of today. They need all that we have learned to help them start on a good road. It is our part to keep a broad, courageous vision; the feeling there is nothing to be afraid of; that we have the best chance in this country of winning out, of any country in the world. We should not go about telling our neighbors what there is to fear, but what there is to do. Let's go forward; make decisions, and if we make them wrong be willing to change them."

Mrs. Lawson Speaks.

Mrs. Roosevelt was introduced by Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president of the club, who presided during the program. After the First Lady's address Mrs. Biddle presented Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, General Federation director, who introduced Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, also a guest of honor and speaker. Mrs. Lawson, president of the General Federation, discussed the means club women have at hand for making their contribution to a program of progress and confidence such as Mrs. Roosevelt suggested.

Representative Virginia Jencks, who was to have been a speaker, was unable to be present.

During the luncheon there was music by the United States Navy Band—a gay program of old-fashioned songs, including "East Side, West Side," "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," and "Home on the Range." The guests showed their appreciation with frequent bursts of applause and an occasional voice joining in, humming the melody.

The invocation and benediction were given by the Rev. Paul R. Schearrer; Mrs. Pierce B. Ashburn led the salute to the flag, and the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" was led by Miss Alma Kitchell, contralto, who was guest soloist of the afternoon. Miss Kitchell, who is concert artist with the National Broadcasting Co., came from New York for the occasion. She was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. James Shera Montgomery. Miss Margaret Cuthbert, of N. B. C., also was among the guests. Another feature of the musical program was a group of whistling solos by Miss Janet Coon, accompanied by the band.

Reception Is Held.

A reception in the Chinese room preceded the luncheon which was served in the main ballroom of the hotel. Receiving with the guests of honor and Mrs. Biddle were other special guests including Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., Mrs. Claude A. Swanson and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, from the Cabinet group; Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, Mrs. Ernest H. Daniel, first vice president; Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass, recording secretary; Mrs. Ellis Logan, a past president of the District Federation; Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Mrs. Frank Crowther, Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, and Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt.

Mrs. Lloyd A. Morrison, general chairman of the luncheon, was assisted by Mrs. LeVerne Beales, Mrs. Leon E. Truesdell, Mrs. Grattan Kerans, Mrs. Meritt, Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, Mrs. Walter N. Campbell, Mrs. Tilma B. Parks, and Mrs. Thomas H. Faris.

"Madame Chairman"

By Suzanne.

MRS. BERTRAND H. SNELL, of the League of Republican Women, has just returned from a visit at her home in Potsdam, N. Y., where, for once, she says "the weather" was a legitimate subject of conversation. She was there two weeks. When she arrived the temperature ranged between 80 and 90 degrees, then came rain, followed by hail and, finally, a drop in the mercury to 34, accompanied by snow flurries. Representative Snell's district has more or less of a corner on New York's playgrounds, with both Lake Placid and Saranac Lake included in it.

KATHARINE BROOKS, who was chairman of the benefit given by the Newspaper Women's Club at the Trans-Lux Theater in March, yesterday presented, on behalf of the club, a check for $1,126.17 to the Children's Hospital. It will be used for the maintenance of the club's bed there. Half of the profits of the benefit were voted to the hospital and half to a fellowship fund for club members.

Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, as a member of the board of lady visitors and also an associate member of the club, accepted the check on behalf of the hospital. Miss Margaret Hart, president of the club; Miss Mattie Gibson, the hospital superintendent, and Ned Brunson Harris, secretary of the club, were present. The check brings the amount of the club's contribution to the hospital during the past five years to $2,500.

MRS. LLOYD BIDDLE'S cousin, Mr. Fulton Karr, was the only man present at the federation luncheon yesterday with the exception of the Rev. Paul R. Schearrer, who was on the program. Mr. Karr, a pianist and composer, has presented programs for the federation on several occasions and wrote a song a few years ago dedicated to Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, then retiring president. He feels a particular interest in the club and its activities and yesterday was an unobtrusive onlooker from a table on one of the balconies.

MRS. EDGAR B. MERITT, incoming president of the Political Study Club, and also radio chairman for the General Federation, with Miss Mary Mason, director of the Woman's Forum over WRC, will go to Wallace, N. C., Thursday of next week to be the guest of Mrs. John D. Robinson, who is vice president of the North Carolina Federation of Women's Clubs and hostess for the annual strawberry festival. They will also be entertained at the luncheon being given by the Wallace Woman's Club in honor of Mrs. Roosevelt.

SATURDAY, June 12, buses and private cars will leave the Willard Hotel, Pennsylvania avenue entrance, at 1 o'clock, taking members of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities on a pilgrimage to historic places in nearby Virginia. They will visit Pohick Church, the gardens of Gunston Hall and Rippon Lodge, where tea will be served by the hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis. Members of the association and others who desire to join them in visiting the landmarks included in the trip have been asked to communicate with Miss Laura Dorsey, Calverton Apartments, who is in charge of reservations.

Kensington Minister Going to West Point

Essary, of the Washington Times, second vice president; Dorothy Pletcher Howerth, special writer, treasurer; Miss Virgila Stephens, recording secretary; Hope Ridings Miller, society editor of The Washington Post, corresponding secretary; Miss Hornaday, Betty Garnett, of the Washington Daily News, and Miss Roberta Bradshaw, Consolidated News Features, board of governors.

Mrs. Boole Entertained By National W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith and the national officers of the W. C. T. U. entertained Dr. Ella A. Boole and the officers of the world W. C. T. U. at luncheon yesterday at the Hotel Washington, headquarters of the world convention to be held beginning Thursday.

Mrs. Smith, who is president of the W. C. T. U. of the United States, is hostess for the convention.

Davis Garden Scene Of Republican Party

Mme. Cantacuzenne, New President of Women's League, Senator's Wife, Act as Hostess at Fourth Annual Bridge Benefit.

MRS JAMES J. DAVIS, wife of Senator Davis, opened her home and garden on Massachusetts avenue yesterday for a benefit bridge sponsored by the League of Republican Women. This year, unlike last, the sun smiled on the party. Although the afternoon was warm and threatened a storm, it did not come and league members and their friends enjoyed their bridge games under the trees and the entertainment which followed. This is the fourth season Mrs. Davis has been hostess at such a benefit.

Mme. Cantacuzene, newly elected president of the Republican group, was present, wearing a tailored white silk dress with a wide-brimmed white hat, trimmed with a narrow bow of green and a single white peony at her belt, the green leaves of which matched the trimming on her hat. Mrs. Davis wore a flowered chiffon dress. The flowers in her frock harmonized with the profusion of pink and white roses covering the fence the entire distance around the garden.

An accordionist, Miss Sylvia Kaplowitz, in a gypsy costume, played during the afternoon, moving among the tables and later accompanied the dance numbers presented by Miss Marion D. Venable and Mr. Paul Fox in the garden setting. Added features were the fortune tellers, Miss Gale Nelson, who was in the house, and Mrs. Eleanor Hall, whose "booth" was the doll's house which stands under the trees some distance back on the grounds.

The four young daughters of the hostess, the Misses Jane, Jean, Jewel and Joan Davis, assisted in serving. Other assisting were Mrs. James G. Wilkes, Mrs. Cooper Rhodes, Mrs. Lawrence Carpenter, Miss Dorothy Tirrell, Miss Frances Rainey, Mrs. George L. Hart, Mrs. William H. Mondell, jr., Miss Dorothy Smith Mrs. Jordan Edmonds and Mrs. Emery Wheeler.

Mrs. Warren R. Austin, wife of Senator Austin, of Vermont, was general chairman of arrangements, with Mrs. William Castle, Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Mrs. Charles Johnston, Mrs. Corcoran Thom, Mrs. Earl Venable and Mrs. Maurice Thatcher as chairmen of various committees.

Among the many guests were Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Mrs. Bertrand H. Snell, Mrs. Ralph Church, Mrs. Evans and her daughter, Miss Meta Evans; Mrs. Paul Myron Linebarger, Mrs. J. J. Mack, Mrs. Daniel R. Reed, president of the Congressional Club, with Mrs. Jesse Walcott and Mrs. Leon Treusdell, Mrs. Frank Mondell and Mrs. Edwin Harriman.

from its principles has become, owing to this fact, the moral support of weak peoples."

The attendant remained as interpreter. The Emperor can converse in only his native tongue and French. Most of the questions had been submitted and thought over in advance. There was the quesion of the American missionaries in Ethiopia:

"I do not think that the authorities of occupation in Ethiopia will tolerate American or any other missions besides the Italian, and even if they allow them to enter, it will only be a formal thing, without allowing them to do any useful work."

Watches Spanish Strife.

Then, turning to the subject of the Spanish situation, His Majesty declared he followed with interest "the painful Spanish tragedy."

"A long time ago I predicted what is now taking place in Spain. It is one of the consequences of the system of supremacy by force. The same malignant propaganda, which ill-treated Ethiopia before and after the aggression to alienate her from world opinion, is today used against the Spanish republic and her institutions.

"Those who believe that with audacity one can indulge in everything have acted in such a way as to perpetrate their murderous activities as far as Spanish soil. As our civil population, our town and villages have been bombarded, machine-gunned, burnt, and destroyed by airplanes without any risk and without valor, the same airplanes, disguising themselves, savagely massacre today the Spanish people, destroy the ancient Spanish cities.

"Like the Ethiopian people, the Spanish people desire nothing more than to live in peace in their own country and to pursue their own destiny freely. The League of Nations and all civilized nations are in duty bound to stop all foreign intervention in Spain and to loyally seek the means by which to stop this frightful massacre between brothers."

Still Seeks Justice.

Reviewing Ethiopia's case before the League of Nations, he pointed out that things were at status quo, and that Ethiopia still asked that the Covenant be respected and justice administered.

"In spite of all its weaknesses, the League of Nations has not ceased to reaffirm its principles, and to resist the defaults of some of its members. If the League failed completely in its task a frightful chaos would ensue for the peace of the world.

"The wisdom of the nations should strive that this should not happen and each of them ought to bring its loyal co-operation to enforce this institution, instead of destroying it.

"It must be mentioned here, that in fact, the conquest of Ethiopia by the Italian army is far from being an accomplished fact, and if Italy, after having been in such a hurry to "annex" Ethiopia, asks with as much persistence that the nations may recognize "her conquest," it is because she wishes to reassure herself beforehand of 'de jure' recognition so as to be able to complete her conquest afterward."

Wants to Visit U. S.

The Emperor also reaffirmed his desire to visit the United States, declaring that he "always had the intention of visiting America," and "would do so whenever the opportunity presents itself."

Only once during the interview did a smile break the sad, solemn countenance. That was when the interpreter left the room for a minute. With a broad grin that showed rows of white teeth, he asked, in French, why the writer did not speak French very well. He was told there had been little practice on the part of his guest—or words to that effect.

At other times he sat like a statue, or bowed and spoke through the interpreter, or gazed at the gilded "period" furniture, at the chairs with the red, silk seats and backs.

In this mansion, built of Bath stone—a sort of chalky lomestone used since the days the Romans built their first bath around Britain's only hot springs—lives also the Emperor's court and family.

There is one son, the Duke of Harar, 12, who attends a boarding school in Bath; one daughter, Princess Sahle, 5; another daughter, Princess Tsahai, 17, who is in training at Children's Hospital, St. Ormond street, London, and who comes home each week-end, and the Empress. Crown Prince Asfaou Wosan is in Jerusalem.

Retains Bodyguard.

The house and gardens are almost hidden from the roadway by a high stone wall and a thick fringe of trees just inside the walls. For admission, a visitor must press a button beside the big iron grill gates.

As the writer walked up the winding drive to the house, accompanied by the attendant, he saw a very large, dark man in gray cape and fez standing on the stoop. The man had disappeared by the time the visitor arrived at the stoop, but was seen again at the far end of the hall just before the doors to the audience room were opened.

Someone later said this was probably the Emperor's bodyguard, with whom he is seen as he drives through the streets of Bath. But not often does he drive down the 2-mile valley road to the center of the town—a city of some 68,000 souls, nestled among the high green hills that look for all the world like those of eastern Pennsylvania. When he does there is a crowd. The driver and bodyguard are sometimes aided by police. The people of Bath think highly of their distinguished "citizen" and all desire a chance to see him.

The Emperor's daly routine is usually office work, or perhaps a drive to London, 100 miles away, to spend a day or two at the Ethiopian Legation. On Sundays he and his family and court worship the Triune God in a special little temple fitted out for him in this mansion retreat, for the Emperor is a devout member of the orthodox Coptic Church.

Steel Operations Slump to 77.4%

New York, June 1 (AP).—The sharpest decline in the Nation's steel operations in many months was reported today by the American Iron and Steel Institute in the wake of the tieup of strike-bound plants of some independent producers in the Cleveland, Youngstown and Chicago districts.

The operating rate this week, the institute estimated, will be 77.4 per cent of capacity compared with 91 per cent last week.

Norman Prince Body Removed To Cathedral

War Aviator Killed in France Honored by Troops, Veterans.

While Army planes droned overhead in the traditional salute to a dead war-bird, the body of Norman Prince, Boston aviator who died while fighting for France, was entombed yesterday in Washington Cathedral.

Following close behind the caisson which bore Lieut. Prince's body to the crypt where his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Prince, and his brother, Frederick H. Prince, jr.

Also in the escort were troops from Fort Myer and 30 members of the Lieut. Norman Prince Post, No. 1506, a Boston unit of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Robert Luce, John W. McCormack, William P. Connery, jr., and George J. Bates, of the Massachusetts Congressional delegation; Maj. Ralph Robart, representing the Governor of Massachusetts; Richard F. Cunningham, representing the Mayor of Boston; James A. McDonough, of Boston, and Mr. and Mrs. John W. Barriger 3d, of Washington.

At the entrance of the chapel, Anthony J. Rock, past commander of the Boston V. F. W. post led other members in a final tribute. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Wallace E. Hayes, Massachusetts State chaplain of the V. F. W.

Soldier bearers carried the flag-draped casket to the Chapel of St. Joseph of Arimathea, where services were conducted by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, assisted by the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell.

The services were concluded with benediction, sounding of taps and the presentation of the flag which had covered the casket to Lieut. Prince's mother. The flag was a gift from the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Next fall, Lieut. Prince's body will be transferred to a tomb now being built in the Chapel of St. John by his parents.

Prince, a founder of the famous Lafayette Escadrille, died in France October 15, 1916, from injuries received in a crash.

Bob Burns Says:

They say when there's a lotta building going on, it's a sign of good times. Of course they throw these bungalows up pretty fast. All they're made of is tar paper, chicken wire and chalk. But I want'ta tell you, the bungalows ain't to be sneezed at! You don't dare sneeze at some of 'em.

The other night I was havin' dinner with a friend who lives in a new duplex and I heard a scratchin' sound that sounded like it was comin' out of the wall. I says "You don't mean to tell me you got rats in this place already?" My friend listened a while and he says "No, that's the neighbors next door eatin' celery."

THE FEDERAL DIARY

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

"Rebels."

Now comes the magazine, Merit, organ of the United Civil Service Employes, to point out exactly what the seven "rebel" A. F. G. E. lodges have been contending: That the best way to frustrate unfavorable legislation is to bring to the very laps of Congressmen a loud expression of public opinion against the unwanted measures.

This is what the seven lodges have become "rebels" about. They have argued that the best way to combat the Byrnes and Cannon proposals would be through public opinion—to arouse the country generally to the idea that there is no economy in curtailing "essential public services" or by keeping Government workers in a demoralized state through the fear of losing their jobs or suffering drastic salary cuts.

The national headquarters and a majority of the A. F. G. E. District Department members have sided, to date, with the national headquarters in disavowing the attempts of the seven lodges to bring the fight against the economy measures strongly into the open.

It is entirely possible that the editors of Merit had none of this in mind when they penned the article, "Let Congress Know," in the current issue of the magazine. But in all events, it props the contention of the seven lodges which, incidentally, have formally called the long-talked-about mass meeting. Here is the article:

"Mr. Doxey. I think the gentleman is correct."

"This conversation shows very, very plainly what the members of Congress expect. They cannot hope to be informed concerning the attitude of the public on all of the various measures which come before them, and are therefore thrown back on expressions of opinion sent them by their constituents.

"Anyone who thinks that the Congress will 'do the right thing' is only right if the members of Congress have received news from back home on the particular subject.

"Right at present one piece of employe legislation is pending before the Rules Committee and word comes back that 'there is no pressure for the rule to bring up the bill.

"Those who seek legislation or seek to retard certain measures have the job well outlined. The Congressmen must be informed of the public opinion concerning the question.

Rebuff.

And now the executive council of the Committee Against False Economy, the official name of the seven "rebel" lodges, steps out and fires again:

"On Friday, May 28, the District Department of the A. F. G. E. rebuffed for a second time the plea of our delegates for a vigorous public campaign against the so-called economy measures. This refusal to protect the living standards of their members, despite President Green's plea for a strong stand against these false economy measures at the Maryland-District of Columbia Federation of Labor Convention just a week previous cannot be interpreted as a reflection of the sentiment of the majority of Government employes.

"The position taken by the A. F. G. E. District and national leadership in this present crisis cannot be attributed to a regard for the interests of the cadership itself, many of whom hold high personnel and Civil Service Commission positions.

"The action of the District Department will in no way alter our original plans. The support given us so far shows quite definitely where Government employes stand on this issue."

Notes.

The top event of the night is the party the Southern Society of Washington is giving in the Willard Hotel in honor of Gov. and Mrs. George H. Earle, of Pennsylvania. Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, will be toastmaster. The address of the Pennsylvania governor will be broadcast. His subject: "The South and Our National Problems."

* * * *

While thousands of Government employes here are measuring the potentialities in the economy proposals and thinking that many yardsticks are required for the purpose, I. J. Fullmer, of the Bureau of Standards—a quiet-faced, heavy-set man—daily works over an interferometer, by means of which differences in lengths are measured in terms of wave lengths of light to the millionth of an inch. Which must engage him every minute of his working day and leave him little thought for the controversies now rampant in personnel circles.

Debate Limit Starts Uproar At Code Parley

Angry Citizens Demand Refrigeration Rules Be Changed.

After the hearing had come to what all concerned considered an unsatisfactory end, Col. Daniel I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, said the "question will be restudied, and all concerned given an opportunity to express themselves."

Immediately after Capt. Tansey had said no one would be allowed to talk longer than five minutes, Col. Julius I. Peyser requested that apartments be considered separately.

Tansey refused and asked Col. Peyser why he had not submitted a brief. After Peyser had declared he had never seen or heard of the code until just before the hearing, Tansey said:

"Copies of the proposed code were mailed out and a notice appeared in the papers. We can't postpone the hearing because some people don't read the papers.

Peyser shouted back:

"Listen, you can't cut me off. I am one of the taxpayers here. Your very manner makes me suspicious. I am not afraid of either you or the Commissioners. There is a power higher than you that we can appeal to."

The 200 persons present shouted their approval.

Ringgold Hart, representing the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, then joined the debate and declared:

"In all my 23 years' experience with the District Government, I have never met anything like this. It is an insult to my intelligence to try to state my position on this technical matter in the five minutes you have allowed us."

Julian I. Richards, representing the Washington Restaurant Association, in criticizing the code said:

"One section of the code is so ridiculous it is not worthy of discussion. It provides that when a refrigerating place in a large restaurant broke down—and with ammonia circulating in the establishment and endangering lives—the owner could not repair the machine until he had obtained a permit to do so from the District Building."

Charles J. Rush, secretary of the Washington Real Estate Board, condemning the retroactive provisions of the code, said:

"The retroactive provision of the proposed code would in effect render obsolete and unlawful the use of equipment which when purchased was lawful. The result would be unbearable losses to owners in cost of replacements and license fees."

Laurel in Bunker Hill Park Inspected at Peak of Blossoms

Mrs. D'Argo, Donor, Views 5,400 Bushes Recently Planted in Northeast Area; CCC Camp Official Accompanies Her.

The 5,400 mountain laurel bushes donated to the Capital park system for planting in Bunker Hill Park were in full bloom yesterday and Mrs. Della D'Argo, the Prince Georges County woman responsible for the display, made a tour of inspection.

Desirous of giving the Northeast section a unique recreation area, Mrs. D'Argo last year offered the office of National Capital Parks not only the laurel but also 600 dogwood trees, 2,000 blueberry bushes and 300 hollys. Her proposal was accepted, and the work of developing the park was begun by Civilian Conservation Corps Camp NP-8, of which Sidney Evert is superintendent.

Evert accompanied Mrs. D'Argo on the inspection trip yesterday. She said:

"I am pleased beyond expression. Just to think that this much has been done in the short period of one year! Why, there is no telling how extensive and beautiful it can be made over a period of years."

Bunker Hill Park, which is bounded by Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Otis and Perry streets, will be dedicated June 12.

House to Get New Abattoir Measure Today

Public Hearings to Start Late Next Week on Revisions.

A revised abattoir bill will be submitted to the House District Committee today by Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal. The committee will then schedule public hearings, probably to start the latter part of next week.

Principal changes in the bill provide that licenses issued by the District zoning commission to industries already operating shall be for three years instead of one year and that appeals may be made to the United States District Court within 30 days.

Chairman Mary T. Norton said she will recommend that hearings be held before the full District Committee, but that it will be impossible to start the inquiry before Thursday of next week.

The bill barring abattoirs and other "nuisance" industries from Washington was sent back to the District Commissioners by Mrs. Norton after it was withdrawn from the House floor under fire. Some 15 amendments proposed by the District heads had not been incorporated in the bill at that time.

Seal said yesterday he has not yet drafted a bill requested by the Senate sub-committee which held hearings on the companion King bill.

The Senate group directed him to draft a measure allowing for compensation of the Adolph Gobel Co. because of its investment on Benning road.

The House District Committee also will take up the daylight saving time proposal of Representative Sacks (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, today.

Although a sub-committee will report the bill without recommendation, members of the committee predict that it will be defeated.

Hooe Asks Hearing On D.C. Demand for His Resignation

Continuing to fight the demand for his resignation as assistant corporation counsel in charge of police court, Rise Hooe yesterday asked the District Commissioners for a hearing.

The demand for his resignation came last week from Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, who then said numerous complaints had been received in reference to the conduct of Hooe's office.

Seal has indicated that unless the resignation is forthcoming Hooe will be cited before the District Personnel Board.

Koester Appointed War Chief's Assistant

Charles W. Koester, of Washington, yesterday was named executive assistant to the Secretary of War. The appointment was made by Secretary Harry Woodring.

The new executive assistant is a graduate of the University of Nebraska, George Washington and Harvard, and is a member of the bar in the District. He was formerly chief of the recording section of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. He lives at the Mayflower Hotel.

Car Fatalities Climb 100% During May

8 Persons, Including 6 Pedestrians, Die as Toll Mounts.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

In spite of efforts to promote traffic safety on Washington streets, a new high mark for accidents, injuries and deaths was established in May, it was reported yesterday at the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

Police and traffic control authorities, blaming the danger uptrend on negligent driving and walking, prepared to launch a new safety program.

Eight persons—six of them pedestrians—were killed in mishaps during May. This was twice the number killed in April.

Accidents increased by 131 over April, with 1,219 reported as against 1,088. And in April, 420 persons were injured. This figure jumped to 488 last month.

48 Deaths to Date.

Thus far this year, 48 motorists and pedestrians have met accidental deaths as compared to 37 at this time last year. At the end of May, 1936, the record stood: Deaths, 5; injuries, 395, and accidents, 874.

In April of this year, only two pedestrians figured among the traffic fatalities.

A table prepared by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer shows the accident trend during the first five months of this year as compared to 1936. It reads:

Deaths	48	37
Injuries	1,966	1,529
Accidents	5,339	3,712

A growing disregard for the safety of others and failure of motorists to awaken to their responsibilities were cited by Van Duzer as accident causes.

District officials, it was pointed out, lack adequate funds to install safety measures similar to those now in operation throughout the country. Antiquated equipment and understaffed personnel, it was reported, hinder efforts to improve conditions.

Safety Car in Use.

Since Maj. Brown inaugurated the safety patrol car—a police cruiser without lettering or "special" tags—Policeman George M. Patton, the "safety officer," has arrested more than 400 speeders and careless drivers. This car, said Maj. Brown, is still on the street and will continue to operate for an indefinite period.

Traffic court convictions brought permit suspensions and revocations against the following motorists, it was announced:

Hearst Radio Plea For WMAL Denied

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed the action of District Court in dismissing a suit brought by Hearst Radio, Inc., to compel the heirs of the late M. A. Leese to sell to it a majority of the shares of stock in Radio Station WMAL.

The corporation stated it had obtained an agreement entitling it to purchase the stock when certain details were worked out. The details, it was shown, were never satisfactorily worked out, and some of the heirs withdrew their approval of the sale of the stock.

Under the circumstances the Appellate Court held there was never a binding contract for the sale of the Leese estate interests and that a suit for performance of the contract was out of order. The defendants were Loraine Leese Good, Martin Norman Leese, William Earl Leese and Mrs. Fannie I. Leese, widow of Mr. Leese.

Citizens Seek Funds to Pay More Teachers

Hearings on Supply Bill End Today; Round-up Set for Friday.

With the completion of hearings on the District supply bill expected today, Senator Thomas, chairman of the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations, yesterday predicted that the measure will be reported to the Senate next week.

He said that the sub-committee will begin marking up the bill the latter part of this week. The Senators are due to confer with the District Commissioners in a last-minute roundup on Friday morning.

A plea for additional public school teachers and a proposal to rewrite, but retain, the rider prohibiting teachers from doing clerical work, marked yesterday's hearing.

Miss Selma Borchardt, of the Washington Teachers Union, asked that the rider be retained, but revised. She suggested that the language require the assignment of all regular teachers to classroom work.

This, she said, would provide additional teachers for classes and reduce the number of pupils taught by each teacher.

At the same time, Miss Borchardt proposed that a research department be established in the public school system to perform most of the clerical duties now required of teachers.

The plea for additional teachers came from a group of citizens including Mrs. Robert Riggs, of Woodrow Wilson High School; Mrs. G. H. Collingwood, Mcfarland Junior High School, and Mrs. F. C. Craighead, of Woodrow Wilson.

They told the sub-committee that during the last seven years the number of pupils has increased from 75,454 to 93,509, a gain of 20 per cent, while the teaching staff has grown only 9 per cent.

The supply bill as adopted by the House provided for 54 new teachers, whereas the Budget Bureau recommended 93.

W. C. T. U. Leaders In Session Today

The world's W. C. T. U. executive committee will meet this morning to discuss the international convention, which opens at Constitution Hall tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. Dr. Ella A. Boole, Brooklyn, N. Y., world president, will preside. The committee includes world officers, the advisory committees and presidents of member countries.

Miss Elise Hill Is Named Toastmistress for Senior Banquet.

Marjory Elaine Custis, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Gregg Custis, was awarded the alumnae prize for "contributing most to the school this year."

Four Face Trials For Bureau Thefts

Four youths were held for the grand jury yesterday when they were arraigned in Police Court in connection with thefts from the Bureau of Standards and homes in the Northwest section.

Bonds of $500 were set in each case against the youths when they pleaded not guilty before Judge Walter J. Casey. The youths are Charles S. Taylor, 19, 3808 Veazey street northwest; Edward Kemper, 22, 1704 Kenyon street northwest; Milton J. Dunn, 17, 3721 Van Ness street northwest, and John Sullivan, 4205 Thirty-eighth street northwest. All the boys were able to make the bail.

Detective Sergt. Eugene Lambert, who made the arrests, said the cases are an accumulation over more than a year, during which time thefts were reported at the Bureau of Standards, U. S. Naval Air Station, National Guard Armory, and many homes and business places.

Trio Asks Ice Rink at City Auditorium

Indicates Franchise May Be Placed Here by Hockey League.

Washington should have not only a professional hockey team, but also a huge ice rink for public skating and speed contests, the Capital Auditorium Advisory Committee was told yesterday at the last of its open hearings.

Plans for placing a District team in the International American Hockey League were disclosed by Russell M. Arundel, secretary to former Senator Jesse H. Metcalf, of Rhode Island, and his associate, Prew Savoy.

E. Christopher Meyer, chairman of the Washington Committee of Ice Skaters, urged that the auditorium contain a rink not merely large enough for hockey games, but of such size as to be subdivided for simultaneous public skating and with an eight-lap racing track.

Another witness, Alfred Kastner, strongly recommended location of the auditorium on the Municipal Center site at John Marshall place and Pennsylvania avenue, as a means of livening up the downtown area, which, he said is dead after 5 p. m. daily. A Washington architect, he urged that the design for the structure be chosen by competition.

Speaking in behalf of Arundel and himself, Savoy, who lives at 1208 Eigteenth street northwest, revealed that his associate holds an optional franchise for an International American League hockey team in the District.

If the plans of Arundel and Savoy materialize, Washington would see 24 home games a season, which lasts from early November until mid-April. They said they are prepared to exercise the option for a league franchise and organize the Washington Ice Hockey Club, with $100,000 in fully paid-in capital stock all privately subscribed and not less than 51 per cent owned by Arundel.

The club would enter into a contract with the Capital Auditorium Commission, or its agent, to lease the ice arena, provided it measures at least 210 by 100 feet and the seating capacity is not less than 10,000. Rental would be for 36 days a year on a 10-year lease basis, the auditorium receiving $25,000 a year.

As an alternative plan, Arundel and his associates would finance the installation of an ice rink, the cost and carrying charges to be amortized back to them over a 10-year lease period.

Costarred With Rosalind Russell in "Night Must Fall," Montgomery Departs Widely From Accustomed Style; Phil Regan Kept Busy; the Postman Rings Twice; Notes of the Current Amusement World.

"NIGHT Must Fall," the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production that was screened for the drama desks yesterday afternoon in the private projection room of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange—which now is air-cooled to a pleasant crispness—reveals many unusual qualities.

BELL.

The fable was fashioned by two of England's noted playwrights—the original story by Emlyn Williams; the screen adaptation by John Van Druten. It was directed by Richard Thorpe, who did a thoroughly good job. Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell appear in roles that are distinctly out of their habitual grooves. The plot, while gruesome to the last degree, is shot through with comedy that is refreshing and delightful, if one can lose thought of the inevitable end to which it is to lead.

This peculiar necessity of forgetting the sinister import of the whole grim business is due to the fact that the developments are flashed in advance to the audience. "Night Must Fall" has no secrets from its audience, although, in spite of that, it compiles a constantly cumulative degree of suspense and ends with the collapse of the debonair arrogance of a supreme egotist, who thinks he is the man who can commit the perfect crime and get away with it.

The role of Danny in this picture might seem an odd assignment for Robert Montgomery, whose greatest successes, heretofore, have been in light comedy parts in sophisticated parlor comedy, but he does so incomparably fine a job as the masquerading murderer that this subject cannot do otherwise than appreciably raise his rating as an actor of forcefulness and versatility. A few hours after the screening of the picture, I am unable to recall a single instance in which Montgomery ever stepped out of character or failed to make the most of his dramatic opportunities.

I am not sure that so much can be said of Rosalind Russell, cast in the costellar role. It seemed to me that a good deal of the time she walked through her scenes with the stiffness of a handsome young woman with a ramrod up her back.

But the point of these early observations is merely to point out that "Night Must Fall" is perhaps unique among melodramas of recent release in many of its aspects. It will keep a spectator chuckling during most of the infrequent intervals when he is not sitting on the edge of his chair, grasping both arms, to keep from tearing open that hat box to find the murdered women's head inside! That is never done, but you know the head is there and never are quite sure what is going to happen next.

There will be, as usual, a complete and detailed review of this picture in these columns next Saturday morning. In the meantime, "Night Must Fall" is recommended as a melodrama of a little different stamp and a vehicle that presents Robert Montgomery in a light in which you never have seen him before. The boy can act.

It was nice of Phil Regan to hunt your correspondent out of a corner seat in the last row of the projection room yesterday afternoon to exchange greetings. Arriving after the film had started and as blind as a bat, coming in out of the sunlight, I did not even know he was there. It is remarkable the way this fellow gets about, what with offering a trophy for the Police Benefit fight card tonight, being made an honorary member of the Metropolitan Police Force, primarily in honor of himself, but partially in commemoration of the local service of his uncle, an Earlier Phil Regan, and all of the social obligations he has been called upon to assume during his week of headlining on the stage at Loew's Capitol. A fine broth of a lad, Phil.

Communications Department.

Once again from far-off Amborina, in Sumatra, comes a letter from that inveterate globe-trotter, Maynard Owen Williams, foreign editor of the National Geographic Magazine, in which it is revealed that in Medan he recently has been regaled by screenings of "Romeo and Juliet," "Wife Versus Secretary," "The Jungle Princess" and other comparatively recent American films. Mr. Williams seems to feel that the Sumatran sound equipment is not quiet all that it should be, but outside of that, all seems to be well with his picture-going.

After citing a great many things that did not prompt him to write me, Mr. Williams, in his last paragraph breaks down and says: "Over by the Eighteenth Century Dutch fort, which the Burghers built while our colonies were fighting for independence, there is a military band with a swing to it. And what made me grab this pen was the fact that these Ambonese bandsmen on this historic "isle of spice" were playing a bit of Sousa, 'The Washington Post March.' It may be a small world, but it's a deuce of a trip to get there. Cheerio. (Signed) Williams."

And then from Glasgow, Scotland, on practically the same mail, comes a card from Cookie Bowers, the vaudeville topliner and sound recording artist of Max Fleischer's cartoon comedies, who is "growling and miming" twice nightly at the Empire Theater. Says Cookie: "With my kindest personal regards. Your stories about me have been reprinted throughout this territory. Sincerely (Signed) COOKIE."

There is still another wire on the desk. It remarks that Whiteman hasn't got it; Lombardo hasn't got it, nor have Calloway, Fats Waller or any other American merchants of modern rhythms. Benny Meroff, coming to the Capitol stage on Friday, it seems, is the only one who has got it. The subject of all these pros and cons appears to be somé sort of a new musical treatment of popular tunes known as "jibe music," whatever that may be. The Western Union ends with the admonition that "it will get you." We've taken a lot of jibes before and see no reason for quitting now.

Announcement comes from the Pierce Hall Players that through an inadvertent confusion of days and dates, their final production of the season was stated to be scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday nights of this week. The correct playing dates are tonight and tomorrow night, June 2 and 3. The play is "Holiday;" the place Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest. Line forms to the right.

Lead Cast in Novel Melodrama

When "Night Must Fall" opens on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday, Washington picturegoers not only will see a melodrama of most unusual nature, but also will find Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell, pictured above, in roles slightly different from those in which they are accustomed to be seen. Miss Russell may not be at her best, but Montgomery certainly is at his.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, June 1.—Idol chatter: Ironic that Marion Talley, who raises beef for meat packers on her Kansas ranch, is on a meatless diet. It's the new way Clark Gable cuts his hair that makes his ears seem closer to his head. In need of good pictures to bolster fading prestige: Elissa Landi. Gladys George seems to be sharing Mae West's Hollywood social ostracism. Joan Crawford dyed her hair red—then browned it again the same day because Franchot "no like."

CLARK GABLE.

Penny-for-the-thoughts behind the vacuous-eyed stare Marion Davies assumes for cameras. Hear tell that Greta Garbo's leading men would as soon she gave up bread-and-onion sandwiches for lunch. Peas from the same pod: Virginia Bruce and ex-star Vilma Banky. The honeymoon will be over when Mary Astor pauses to glance at a window display of diaries. Even in coldest winter Jimmy Cagney is a no-undershirter. Wonder if Rochelle Hudson will get over looking as if she should have school books under her arm?

The Al Jolsons (Ruby Keeler) call their adopted baby "Option" because it wants to be picked up. Joseph Calleia can say "No" with less effort and more emphasis than any actor on the screen. Try as she may, Kay Francis cannot blow smoke through her nose. May Robson's habitual velvet-at-the-neck reminds me of the richest woman in the small town of my childhood. Every spring there is a rush to see which star will have the first summer tan. Do Marie Wilson's long eyelashes give you a shudderly feeling too?

It is common knowledge that Shirley and Mrs. Temple are about the most "yessed" people in town. Prop grins are 10 cents a dozen when studio workers gather around the star-tot and her mother. So it was rather amusing to discover this morning that Shirley, despite her few years, has been wise enough to note the shallowness of studio smiles.

Shirley was sitting for photographs. An assistant cameraman was posing her, but because the young star was in sullen mood, he was having little luck. At last Mama Temple said, "Why don't you smile, darling?" At which Shirley gave out with this childish philosophy: "Because that man behind the camera smiles all the time, and he never means it!"

For two months now, Nat Pendleton has been trying to train his Great Dane, Sandow, to go to the store with a message and bring home a basket filled with groceries and meats. I happened to drop in momentarily at Nat's beach home and found him huddled over his household bills with a worried frown. "Don't ever try to teach a dog to bring meat from the grocery," he advised. "If my butcher's bill is honest, it's already cost me $40 worth of chops trying to train my mutt."

"There are too many people in Hollywood who are always trying to be firsts," Betty Furness was telling Bing Crosby and Bob Burns the other day. "At every party you hear people bragging about being first with some new fad. I think I'll be different, and be a Hollywood last. What would you suggest, Bing?" But it was Burns who interrupted with, "Maybe you ought to buy Crosby's racing stable."

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, June 1.

ON THE DAY that Dick Merrill flew back to America from Europe Grover Whalen, who was in London then, phoned the World's Fair office in New York and ordered all the fair employes to assemble at the Empire State Club for the purpose of receiving a special message he was sending via the Merrill plane . . . Five hundred of the employes were assembled, and waited at the club until 8 p. m.—because Merrill and Lambie had forgotten to take Whalen's message, which was left on the plane . . . The drink and dinner bill for the group was over $500. And when a motorcycle cop finally brought the message—they discovered it was a reprint of a speech Whalen had delivered in Paris!

Gummo Marx says he bought his new office furniture at the cheapest price possible. "You see," he boasts, "I got it all retail!" . . . When Gov. Allred of Texas visited President Roosevelt on that recent fishing trip, he was promised the next Federal judgeship in Texas.

"THANKS FOR THE PIECE about the Lindbergh dinner," writes Harry A. Bruno. "It was, as you pointed out, very amusing to hear Mr. Thomas W. Lamont's comments, and more particularly so because one of my prize possessions is perhaps the longest letter that Col. Lindbergh ever wrote in longhand . . . It's dated November 22, 1927, and says: 'Now that my affairs have quieted down somewhat and I have a little more time to devote to writing, I want to thank you, once again, for the assistance you gave me both in the preparation of my flight to Paris and after my return to New York.' . . . I don't know who wrote Mr. Lamont's speech, but it did cause those of us who were close to Lindbergh in 1927 to enjoy a very hearty laugh."

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Avoiding the Finesse.

South was interested in only one card that his partner might hold: the King of clubs. With that card in the North hand, a small slam would be unbeatable and a grand slam would be made if North had no more than two clubs, or the Queen of clubs as well, or some such card as the Queen of hearts or the King of diamonds. Failing any of these, South might guess the location of the club Queen. Once an asking bid placed the club King, the grand slam bid was a good gamble—especially since South played the hand well in order to eliminate guesswork.

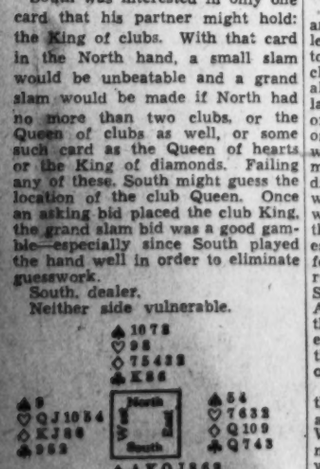
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2♠	Pass	2 N T	Pass
4♠	Pass	4 N T	Pass
7♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

South's jump to four clubs was an asking bid inquiring about the King or a singleton club. North's response of four notrump was correct despite the lack of an Ace, since an opening two bid permits this modification in response to asking bids.

West opened the Queen of hearts, and South won with the King. A less skillful player would have tried to guess the location of the Queen of clubs, but South saw that he could always save the club finesse as his last resort, and looked for a way of discarding a club. The only suit on which a club could be discarded was dummy's ragged holding in diamonds. The most favorable possible distribution of the adverse diamonds was 4-3, which meant that diamonds would have to be ruffed by South three times before the suit could be established. Four entries were therefore needed to dummy (three for ruffing and one for cashing), and South counted the entries carefully. After some thought he saw that if the nine of spades were singleton in either hand, dummy would have three entries in the trump suit and one in clubs.

Accordingly to the second trick the Ace of diamonds was laid down, and the eight of spades was led. When West showed up with the nine, declarer's forethought was rewarded. Dummy won with the ten, and the diamond was ruffed by one of South's honors. The six of spades was led to the seven and the deuce of spades to the three—each being followed by a diamond ruff.

The three ruffs established dummy's seven of diamonds as a winning card and the King of clubs was the entry for its cashing. Declarer, therefore, made his grand slam without a finesse—a tribute both to his accurate bidding and careful play.

Dietrich, Turned Down by Nats in 1936, Hurls No-Hit, No-Run Game for Sox

Feat Means 8-0 Victory For Chisox

Only 3 Browns Reach First Base During Great Pitching.

Chicago, June 1 (AP).—Bill Dietrich, husky Chicago White Sox righthander, achieved the goal of all pitchers today, a sparkling no-hit, no-run triumph as his mates staked him to an 8 to 0 victory over the St. Louis Browns.

Only three Browns reached first base as Dietrich turned in his masterpiece, two on walks and one on an error by Tony Piet in the seventh inning. The victory was the second this season for Dietrich, a former member of the Philadelphia Athletics and the Washington Nationals, against one defeat.

Dietrich's performance gave the White Sox the American League's last two no-hitters, Vernon Kennedy having stopped the Cleveland Indians dead, 5 to 0, on August 31, 1935. Dietrich, who wears glasses while pitching, fanned five batsmen.

Dietrich, who was introduced to the American League and major league baseball by Connie Mack in 1930, was picked up last year at the urging of Manager Jimmy Dykes, after both the Athletics and Senators found they could not use him.

He won four and lost six for the A's, was charged with one defeat while with Washington, and finished out the season by winning four and losing four with the Sox, giving him a record of 8 victories and 11 defeats for the season.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., June 1 (AP).—Bill Dietrich, Chicago White Sox pitcher, who held the St. Louis Browns hitless and runless in Chicago today, turned in a no-hit, no-run game in the New York-Pennsylvania League six years ago, almost to the day.

On June 6, 1931, Dietrich, twirling for the Harrisburg team, blanked the Wilkes-Barre Barons here, 1 to 0, and did not permit a hit.

Edith Clarke, Mrs. Robinson Win Net Title

Mrs. Margaret Robinson and Edith Clarke won the City of Washington women's doubles championship yesterday, outfighting Mary Cootes and Mary Greason, No. 2 seeded team, 6—4, 10—8, in the final round at the Edgemoor Club. The winners were the defending champions.

The men's tourney meanwhile swung into the semifinal round in the doubles, with Barney Welsh and Tony Latona, top-seeded team, setting the pace. The favorites eliminated Bob Bradley and Harry Goldsmith, public parks fixtures, 6—3, 6—1.

Keeping pace were Stan McCaseky and Capt. Stanley Robinson, who defeated Allie Ritzenberg and Ray Stocklinski, 6—3, 6—1, and Joe Baker and Fred Doyle, who turned back the strongjunior combination of Harry Heffner and Davie Johnsen, 6—4, 6—1.

Three of the four quarter-finals in the men's singles are slated for today. Tom Moorhead, unseeded Chevy Chase Club entrant, and Frank Shore, seeded No. 4, will play their quarter-final tomorrow due to a sprained ankle received by Moorhead recently.

Terps' Grid Games May Be Broadcast

The University of Maryland's home football games, which would include those played in Baltimore, may be broadcast under the sponsorship of a national refining company next autumn if plans under consideration are approved. The matter will come up before a board meeting next week, when the contract, in all probability, will be signed.

Dr. L. B. Broughton, chairman of the athletic board, refused to disclose what the terms would be, although it is thought that the school would receive about $2,000. Other schools being sought for broadcasts are Pitt, Temple, Penn, Western Maryland, Dartmouth, Syracuse, Holy Cross and Lafayette.

Alice Marble Wins.

Hopeful Nats Heading West For 9 Games

Bolton Left Home, Trade Hinted; Harris Has Pitching Problem.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

En Route to Detroit, June 1.—The Nats toted their three-game winning streak into the West tonight and tomorrow will expose it to the leaderless Detroit Tigers.

Their second fling at the West this season finds the Nats commencing with a three-game series in Detroit before moving on to Cleveland, thence to St. Louis, thence to Chicago. And it was a cheery lot of Washington athletes who occupied the special cars tonight.

Manager Bucky Harris was attacking a huge beefsteak with great vigor when he laid down his fork and reflected:

"We certainly have no complaint with our pitching recently. Our last five pitchers have gone the distance and it wasn't their fault that we didn't win all five games. But now it looks as if we're squared away with our hitting."

He meant that Al Simmons was beginning to author those long pokes that amassed for him a .345 lifetime average in the big leagues and that Cecil Travis was now bolstering the lower end of the batting order and that Buddy Lewis had begun to bang the ball again.

"The only fellow who hasn't hit his batting stride yet is Joe Kuhel," said Harris, "and that's not his fault. He's been unlucky when he has hit the ball. He's been driving it squarely at the infielders and outfielders on a line and it's been a caution the way his line drives have been falling foul by inches."

But it was the pitching, particularly that was cheering Harris. "We've been getting nice-pitched games out of DeShong and Newsom and Appleton and Weaver and Fischer lately and with that kind of pitching, we figure to win. If they can keep that up, I'm not worried about winning. This team will

By Bill McCormick.

Washington's fourth annual Police Benefit fight card—the longest and most varied yet offered—will be presented at Griffith Stadium tonight.

Five scheduled ten-round bouts and a curtain-raiser slated to last four rounds will comprise the card. Action will be offered in practically every weight division from the featherweight class to the heavyweight ranks.

The first fist is scheduled to be tossed at 8:30 p. m. A crowd of between 8,000 and 15,000 is expected to drop about $25,000 into the coffers for the privilege of witnessing the yearly fistic fiesta.

This year's police card has been promoted by the fistic firm of Joe Turner and Goldie Ahearn. The idea for such an affair was conceived by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, in 1934. Maj. Brown turned the promotion of his first three shows over to Maj. Harvey L. Miller, secretary of the District Boxing Commission, who realized a neat profit each year for the Police Boys Clubs, one of Maj. Brown's pet projects.

This year Maj Brown decided against holding a fight for his boys' clubs, and the fights were sanctioned for the benefit of the Police Benevolent Association, an organization which furnishes aid to the survivors of policemen killed in action. Officials of the Benevolent Association turned the promotion over to Promoter Turner and Matchmaker Ahearn.

Most of the interest in tonight's card centers around the featherweight bout between Lou Gevinson, former District amateur featherweight champion, and Johnny Pena, who defeated Lou in a previous bout at Turner's Arena.

Before Gevinson was defeated in his fourth professional fight, many close observers had the little Jewish southpaw tabbed as the best 125-pound prospect in the ring today. Pena, on the short end of prohibitive odds, surprised everyone but himself by getting off the floor twice to soundly trounce Lou.

Gevinson's downfall in the first bout was attributed solely to his lack of knowledge of infighting. Since his defeat Gevinson has been studying up on this subject, and, although Pena still rules a betting favorite, many believe this time the local pride and joy will be able to dump Johnny for good in tonight's brawl.

Bob Tow, the Alexandria Adonis, and Sandy McDonald, of Texas, will provide another interest-provoking contest. McDonald, a distinct underdog in prefight wagering, surprised the fancy by holding Marty Gallagher to a draw in a recent contest. This immediately established Sandy as one of the best heavyweights to show in Washington in the minds of many.

Tow just a few weeks ago came out of a retirement, necessitated by a hip injury, to score a stunning knockout over Eddie Mader, a highly regarded heavyweight from New York. The winner of this heavyweight contest probably will be given a chance to meet Jorge Brescia, the South American heavyweight, in a well sponsored bout some time this summer.

Ray Ingram, the "forgotten man of local boxing," also will appear in one of the scheduled ten-rounders. Ingram, who continually has been shunted aside from a bout against Gevinson, which is the thing he most desires, is slated to perform against Joey Archibald.

Archibald, a stable mate of Lightweight Champion Lou Ambers, who will be on hand to second him, is really only a bantamweight who has been stuffed into the featherweight division for this occasion. Despite his small stature Archibald carries TNT in both fists, and is a favorite to beat Ingram.

Ingram has been in line for a shot at Gevinson more often than Mr. A. Hitler has opened his mouth and put his foot in it. Each and every time something has happened to prevent such a bout. One time Gevinson injured his hand, another time his management felt not enough money could be made fighting during the indoor season. The last time Ray was supposed to meet Lou on this very card. The District Boxing Commission prohibited the fight on the ground that Gevinson was not sufficiently experienced to cope with Ingram on a program such as this.

During all this time Ingram has patiently been knocking over the toughest opposition that could be dug up for him, in the hopes that he some day would get his chance to make passes at the District's best drawing card. He has positively been promised that chance if he gets by Archibald.

Norment Quarles, one of the best 135-pounders in the business, will take on Howard Scott, District lightweight champion, in another featured bout. Scott has beaten Quarles on two previous occasions, but the boys who make an occasional wager are betting the result will be different tonight.

A bout between colored middleweights will complete the list of 10-round bouts. In this contest Ossie Stewart, the reigning local colored sensation, will take on one Tom Chester, who gave great promise in the amateur ranks.

Post Predictions.

Bouts are rated from A (the best) to C (don't even go to see them for a police benefit).

LOU GEVINSON, Washington, vs. JOHNNY PENA, New York, featherweights; 10 rounds. Rated B. Their last encounter was a war. Gevinson has learned something since then and Pena is in better condition, so this one should be even better. Gevinson should flatten Pena this time, which is what he should have done the first time.

BOB TOW, Alexandria, vs. SANDY McDONALD, Texas heavyweight; 10 rounds. Rated D. This one is very tough to pick. McDonald should give Tow a nice going over until Robert finds the Texan's chin to win by a knockout. Our choice is Tow, but we must warn you that McDonald, too, has a chance to win by a kayo.

RAY INGRAM, Washington, vs. JOEY ARCHIBALD, Providence, R. I., featherweights; 10 rounds. Rated C. Despite Archibald's punching prowess, we think Ray will win the decision, if not on boxing skill, then because of sheer determination.

NORMENT QUARLES, Hendersonville, N. C., vs. HOWARD SCOTT, Washington, lightweights; 10 rounds. Rated D. Both of Quarles hands are in good shape, which doesn't happen very often. Not only that, but Norment has been taught how to avoid Scott's right hand. Under the circumstances, Qaurles should have little trouble beating the fighter who has twice defeated him.

Harris 'Fed Up' As Cliff Bolton Vanishes Again

Disappears Third Time Within Year; Pilot Is Visibly Irked.

By a Staff Correspondent.

En Route to Detroit, June 1.—Cliff (The Bolter) Bolton has bolted the Nats again.

The stocky little catcher whose vanishing acts in the past have provided Manager Bucky Harris with a perennial headache, today added a new and mystifying disappearance to his record.

His latest vanishing act finds Harris "fed up" with the catcher's antics. Vaguely he hinted that he doubted that Bolton wanted to play ball, or would ever play ball again.

In fact, both Harris and Owner Clark Griffith were quite exasperated with Bolton's continual disappearance and it was believed that when they welcomed him back to the Nats last week it was solely with the intent to use him as trading material in the search for a pitcher.

Cliff Bolton, the stocky catcher who only last Saturday made his peace with Clarke Griffith and the Washington Baseball Club, is missing again. He failed to report at train time late yesterday when the Nats departed for their second Western trip and has not been seen nor heard from since.

Griffith plans no action in the case for at least another day, he said last night. He added that Bolton's wife telephoned him Sunday night, reporting the catcher suffering with a stiff neck. Cliff also failed to report Monday when he was supposed to rejoin the club.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Nicholson, of 1528 D street southeast, whom Bolton was visiting, said he, taking his wife and two children, left their home early Monday morning to look for an apartment. Which probably explains everything—if you know the apartment situation.

Feller 'On Shelf' Now Indefinitely

Cleveland, June 1 (AP).—Baseball's storybook kid, Bob Feller, bothered by a sore arm, was on the shelf today for another indefinite period.

The 18-year-old Cleveland pitcher who skyrocketed to fame by the strikeout route, packed his bag and left the city on a leave of absence expected to last from two weeks to a month.

Endeavour II's Mast Breaks On Trial Spin

Boom Snaps Before Big Mainsail Goes Up; Run Is Delayed.

By the Associated Press.

Newport, R. I., June 1.—The America's cup committee tonight selected Yankee, veteran of two campaigns, and Ranger, newly launched, to meet tomorrow in the first sailing contest of a trial series to determine a defender of "the ould mug."

Ranger si the sloop Harold S. Vandrebilt built at Bath, Me., at his own expense, in the hope of defending for the third successive time the most cherished of all yachting trophies.

Newport, R. I., June 1.—The ill luck which has dogged this year's America's Cup contenders today cost Endeavour II, T. O. M. Sopwith's prospective British challenger for the famous trophy, her main boom.

Shortly after she went out for a trial spin, and before her big mainsail was raised, the boom broke about 30 feet from its outer end and the blue sloop went back to the Herreshoff yard at Bristol for refitting. She left the yard only yesterday and today's would have been her first tuning-up spin in local waters.

Frank Murdoch, structural expert of Sopwith's afterguard, said the mishap was due to faulty repairs, made after the boom broke on a previous occasion.

Only yesterday, as the mast was being stepped in Endeavour I, Sopwith's unsuccessful challenger of 1934, which he has not entirely discarded from consideration in his current bid for the cup, a heavy metal spreader fell from aloft, some hundred feet, and plunged through the deck. It whizzed past the heads of several riggers, but none was injured.

Endeavour I arrived from England tardily, having sailed the last 1,000 miles on her own after losing her convoy, the Diesel yacht Viva, in a gale.

Frank Cunningham, Barnett Make Grade

Al Houghton, Carroll McMasters Also Qualify as Mel Shorey Loses in Playoff; Diffenbaugh, Walper, McKenzie, Quinter Fail by Stroke.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Cliff Spencer, Bob Barnett, and Frank Cunningham paced the local professionals in the National Open sectional qualifying rounds at Chevy Chase yesterday, winning three of the five places while Virginia and Maryland placed one each, Al Houghton, Old Point Comfort, former local pro, and Carroll McMasters, Rolling Road Club of Baltimore.

Spencer coupled a morning 69, the only par round of the day, and an afternoon 73, to lead Barnett, the host club mentor, by two strokes, Barnett shooting 74-71. Houghton making his sixth trip to the open tourney, was third with a 71 and 75, while McMasters and Cunningham won in a playoff from Mel Shorey, all tying at 150.

The intense heat of the afternoon sent the scores soaring. Ten scores of 71 or better were posted at the conclusion of the first round but Barnett, Quinter, Spencer and Charles Betschler were the only 74 breakers in the afternoon. But Coffey and Willie Schreiber, well in running at the morning rounds with 70 and 71, blew up with an 81 and no card, respectively, while George Diffenbaugh went from 72 to 79 and Al Treder, Ralph Beach and Kent Legg were shut out after first round 73's.

McMasters Rallies.

Carroll McMasters saved the Baltimore contingent from a shutout with a spectacular finish, rolling in a 40-foot putt on the last hole for a birdie to tie Cunningham and Shorey and winning the first hole of the playoff with a par 4. After each played the first three holes in a total of four over par, the Burning Tree pro finally nosed out Shorey on the short fourth hole with a 20-foot putt for a par.

Spencer played fine golf in pacing the 39 contestants, playing the first nine in 36 and returning with six 4's and three treys for a sub-par 33. He was four over on his first nine in the afternoon with a 39, but shot a quartet of 3's on the back nine for a 34. Barnett needed 4-4 for a 68 on his final round, but hit his third shot in the shrubs bordering the practice green on the last hole and wound up with a 6 and 71. Houghton played steady, consistent golf in winning a berth, nothing over a 5 appearing on his card.

Shorey wasted several strokes in the afternoon in posting a 77, while Cunningham was unable to card a 3 on his final round, running into a streak of 5's. The latter pair were receiving congratulations on their apparent victory after word was received that Diffenbaugh required 44 on the third nine, but McMasters' great finish prevented the East Potomac pro from gaining a berth.

Quinter Leads Amateurs.

Roland MacKenzie, Leo Walper and Ralph Quinter, who paced the amateur qualifiers, were among those a stroke behind at 151. Diffenbaugh and Betschler won the second and third alternate places in a playoff among the 151 shooters.

Walter Cunningham played the oddest round of the day, requiring 45 strokes on his first nine holes but returning in sub-par 33 for a 78. Luther Steward, who returned no card, holed a spoon shot on the 424-yard eighteenth hole for an eagle deuce. Fred McCloud, Open winner nearly a score of years ago, shot 82-80.

Navy Grid Candidates Drill on Foreign Soil

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., June 1.—Candidates for the Naval Academy football team of next season will take the summer cruise, starting from here Friday, together on the U. S. S. Wyoming, and will be under the general charge of Lieut. Charley Zondorak, one of the coaches of last season.

The practice squadron will touch at Kiel, Germany; Athens, Greece, and Livorno, Italy, and at all these points special parties are likely and a brief football practice just to have the players get their land legs.

Sam Snead Paces Country's Qualifiers.

New York, June 1 (AP).—Sam Snead, the young White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., professional who vaulted into golfing stardom on the winter tournament circuit, continued his sensational play today as 131 golfers successfully passed their sectional qualifying tests for the United States Open championship, to be held at the Oakland Hill Club, Birmingham, Mich., June 10-12.

Snead put a new district among the 30 where today's rounds were played, Huntington, W. Va., right on the map when he shot a 36-hole score of 136 to share the honors with E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, of Stuttgart, Ark., at Litle Rock. The West Virginian shot a dizzy 65 on his afternoon round after a morning 71 while Harrison spread-eagled his field with 69-67.

Only one player among the approximately 1,300 who tired today to win the 131 places in the big tournament, was able to better Snead's afternoon. At Durham, N. C., Orville White, of Greensboro, pro at the same club which sent out Tony Manero a year ago to win the open, carded a 74-64—138 to place third among the day's scorers and contributed the best single round.

Chick Evans, the one-time boy wonder of Chicago and one of three former champions on the list, failed to pass his test at Chicago, missing out by two strokes. At Philadelphia Leo Diegel, Ted Turner and Sam Byrd, former Major League baseball player, were on the outside looking in. Fort Worth contributed another notable list, including Reynolds Smith, Walker Cup player, Abe Espinosa and Joe Ezar. Al Espinosa, Abe's brother failed at Cleveland. The Chicago list also included Johnny Lehman and Gene Kunes.

Other prominent players who missed out included Eddie Held at St. Louis, Charley Yates at Atlanta, Roland MacKenzie and Fred McLeod at Washington, Sam Perry at Birmingham and Lester Bolstad at Minneapolis, and three members of the famous Turnesa family. Mike was successful in the New York metropolitan district but brothers Joe and Phil weren't so lucky while Willie missed out at Providence.

Eastern Faculty Outfumbles Tech, Loses Annual Tilt, 9-8

By John R. Vosburgh

Eastern High's faculty absorbed its annual baseball beating from Tech's pedagogues yesterday and Assistant Principal Chester W. Holmes is partially crippled as an aftermath. Before some 1,000 students, Tech won the yearly travesty, 9-8 for the fourth straight year.

Assistant Principal Holmes sprained his ankle in the third inning when he tried to steal third base and was nipped by a throw from Catcher Artie Woodrack, Tech track coach. He was helped off the field, but is expected back in the line-up next year.

The professors from Lincoln Park had the ball game sewed away until the fifth and final inning, when Tech shoved three runs over the plate to overcome an 8-6 lead.

In the crooshul ninth, Rusty Thompson, Tech baseball coach and winning pitcher, opened a rally with a double. Jimmy Suber, batting hero of the day with a 1000 average on a single, double and a triple, was now pitching for Eastern—its third twirler—and fanned Williams.

Next he hit Artie Wondrack, rotund track coach, and Thompson scored when John Paul Collins, Anacostia High principal, bobbled Clarke's grounder. Suber struck out Foley, but Koehle singled to drive in Wondrack and Clarke with the tying and winning runs.

Thompson fanned Ike Simons to start Eastern's half of the ninth and Artie Boyd, track coach, was a similar victim. Suber doubled, but Chief Charlie Guyon, pinch-hitting for Assistant Principal Chester W. Holmes grounded to the pitcher to end the game for the suffering players. Tea tables, bearing ice water and sundry other condiments, were well manned by Eastern school girls.

Herndon Captures Title by 11-10 Win

Clifton Jones' triple, followed by Turner Kronfeld's timely single, accounted for the winning run as Herndon High School defeated Lee-Jackson, 11-10, yesterday, in the deciding game of the championship race. It was the victors' seventh win in nine league games, and their first championship in more than a decade.

Kronfeld also was the pitching hero, going to Gene Oliver's relief in the eighth inning and holding Lee-Jackson safe over the rest of the distance. Joe Lynch hurled for the losers.

FRED'S WARNING, fractious at the post and started outside of the gates, was rushed up on the outside to take command at the first turn, saved ground thereafter and was under extreme pressure at the end. BLIND TALK saved ground throughout and gained gradually through the stretch while under punishment. TULEYRIES RUBY, in the thick of contention from the start, was not good enough. GAGNE closed some ground. The others were not prominent.

LOCOMOTIVE, first away, continued willingly when headed by STEPPING IN and SILVER ARCH and came again under punishment, to be up in the concluding strides. SILVER ARCH took command under hustling tactics and tired. OAKHURST had speed in spots. ERIN'S SON was squeezed back at break and rallied mildly after trailing.

Ind. Standard Loses Point To Blausteins

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, June 1.—Louis and Jacob Blaustein, of Baltimore, won a point today in their lawsuit against the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana in which they seek to divorce the Pan American Petroleum & Transport Co. from the domination of the Standard Oil system. Standard Oil of Indiana filed notice of appearance with the New York Supreme Court and is now declared within the jurisdiction of the New York courts. Answer to the Blaustein suit will be filed before September 15.

The Blausteins have charged the Standard Oil companies of Indiana and New Jersey and certain of their officers and directors with "having knowingly wasted and diverted the assets and profits of the Pan American Petroleum & Transport Co. and to have forced that company to be conducted for the benefit of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana."

Teagle Cited.

Standard Oil of New Jersey and its then president, Walter C. Teagle, are cited with having "knowingly participated in and connived at some of the illegal acts complained of."

The case now moves to hearings and trial in New York this fall. Charles Evans Hughes, jr., son of Chief Justice Hughes, is attorney for the Standard Oil of Indiana. The Blausteins are represented by former Secretary of State, Col. Henry L. Stimson.

The American Oil Co. was founded in Baltimore in 1910 by Louis Blaustein and was developed to an important position in the industry by the Blausteins, father and son. It has large holdings and property in Washington and is now a subsidiary of the Pan American Petroleum & Transport Co., which, in turn, is majority controlled by the Standard 20 per cent of the Pan American Co., which represents a book value of Oil of Indiana. The Blausteins own $11,000,000.

April Financing A 5-Months' Low

Analysis of statements registered under the securities act of 1933 indicates that new securities with estimated gross proceeds of $288,076,000 became fully effective during April, 1937. This total is the smallest since November, 1936, and compares with $469,907,000 for March, 1937, and with $751,013,000 for April, 1936. The April registrations were characterized by the small aggregate of bonds, notes and debentures, and the large number of small stock issues, that were made available for public sale.

Banks Continue To Sell U. S. Bonds

Reserve system member banks in 101 cities continued liquidation of Government securities during the week ended May 26. The Federal Reserve Board's condition statement for those cities showed yesterday that total holdings declined $9,000,000 for the week to $9,467,000,000 or $743,000,00 under the same week last year.

The decline compared with a $11,000,000 drop in the previous week and was the seventh consecutive weekly decrease. During the seven weeks, banks disposed of $242,000,000 in Government obligations.

Loans by reporting banks to commerce, industry and agriculture with securities as collateral stood at $564,000,000 for the week ended May 26—unchanged from th previous week. The same type of loans otherwise secured or unsecured, however, increased $44,000,000 to $3,668,000,000. Real estate loans fell off $1,000,000 to $1,161,000,000 and loans to banks declined $8,000,000 to $110,000,000.

NewHavenPlan Reduces Debt, Halves Charges

Proposal Would Maintain Integrity of the Rail System.

By the Associated Press.

New Haven, Conn., June 1.—Directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co., only major Eastern railroad forced into trusteeship by the depression, proposed today a plan of reorganization drastically scaling down debts and slicing fixed charges in half.

Edward G. Buckland, chairman, said the plan, filed simultaneously with the Interstate Commerce Commission, in Washington, and the United States District Court here, "make it evident that, except for possible abandonment of unproductive branches, the integrity of the system as a whole is to be maintained."

The New Haven's position in the transportation field between Boston and New York, linked to virtually all southern New England by the road's 2,000 miles of track, "is in no way impaired by the reorganization," Buckland said.

Credit To Be Restored.

The veteran board chairman described the "outstanding feature" as "the plain determination of the directors to restore the credit of the company to a high plane and reduce fixed charges to such a point as to prevent any recurrence of its present financial embarrassment."

Five classes of reorganization securities would be issued. These are: 35-year 4 per cent fixed interest bonds aggregating $147,100,800; 45-year 4½ per cent noncumulative income bonds aggregating $47,414,200; 459,504 shares of first preferred stock with a total par value of $45,950,400; 434,278 shares of second preferred stock with a total par value of $43,427,800, and 1,182,151 shares of no par common stock.

Equipment trust obligations totaling $13,084,000 and certain underlying bonds totaling $36,258,000 would remain undisturbed.

N. Y. Steam Corp. Omits Dividends

New York, June 1 (AP).—New York Steam Corporation announced today ommission of dividends on the $6 and $7 preferred stocks due to "higher taxes and operating expenses." It is a subsidiary of Consolidated Edison Co. The announcement was the third unfavorable dividend action in the local public utility field since April.

Brooklyn Union Gas Co. cut its quarterly dividend from 75 cents to 40 cents, and Brooklyn & Queens Transit Corporation, of the Brooklyn-Manhattan transit system omitted the dividend on the $6 preferred stock. Both blamed increased taxes and operating costs.

The Market

Stocks Work Lower in Dull Trading on War and Gold Talk; Wheat Higher.

New York, June 1.—Financial markets were disturbed by anxiety over war and rumors of one thing and another. Government bonds were mixed. Stocks and commodities declined in dull trading. Turnover in stocks was a little better than the recent daily average at around 700,000 shares. Closing prices were a shade better than the worst. On the whole the stock market was the worst in more than a month. September wheat rose 1⅝ cents to 112½ cents a bushel.

Gold Rumor.

Resumption of trading after the long holiday here found the ground fertile for the worry besetting Europe, but it required only the opening sales to set prices down to the levels suggested by the selling in London this morning and while our markets were closed on Monday. Thereafter the trading affair was a desultory one without much change in price. Foreign currencies also were unsettled by the fact and fancy that made up the market influences of the past two days.

With a more serious turn taken in Spain, which in more thin-skinned times easily would have meant a general war, it seemed as though the markets chose to worry about something with much less substance in it, so far as immediate operations are concerned. The London and Continental markets had a fresh attack of jitters on the price of gold, with more rumors of coming unilateral action by the United States, the world's chief buyer and umbrella holder. These reports were the more damaging in that they created a fresh outpouring of hoarded gold in London, with the result that the unusually large amount of $9,075,000 was tendered at the time of price fixing, making more than $20,000,000 offered during the past three business days.

Apparently most of it was taken by banks here, though how much of it was hedged, or shipped at the risk of foreign correspondents, could not be learned. So long as the gold situation, with its heavy productions, remains uncertain, there will be periodic scares about the price until some kind of international return to gold is made. Gold mining companies appear to fear a cut in price more than they do an international agreement which would limit new output.

Exchange Lower.

The dollar soared abruptly in relation to sterling, but other currencies did not move widely. Most of those which cling to the pound were moderately lower. While this market was closed sterling in London sold at $4.92¼, but better quotations followed when the local market opened. Purchases of sterling against large gold shipments is a powerful stabilizing influence. In connection with the London gold market it is interesting to note that larger daily salesare being made withou tmaterial effect upon the price.

Until recently it was customary to offer at price fixing time only such gold as could be moved without seriously weakening the price, trusting to private sales later in the day to take care of stocks unsold earlier. It is believed that the bulk of the Soviet supply, which is again increasing, has been sold privately and for the most part to American buyers.

Gold Is Money.

Whatever caused the recurrence of the gold price reduction rumors they brought the usual anxious inquiry at the Treasury Department, where Secretary Morgenthau repeated his former assurance that "there is nothing imminent on gold." The phrasing of that reply, while perhaps it goes even further than the Government really needs to go, is nevertheless a sort of crack in the partition through which chilly drafts are bound to blow. Perhaps a bit of uncertainty is desired in official quarters. At any rate nothing will end the gold rumors until this country returns to gold in a realistic way.

Meanwhile, we are obtaining something which the world always will regard as money, and once international trade is resumed on a normal basis, redistribution of gold will automatically take place. No change in the price of gold nor reduction in its production is called for. Action on either line quite possibly would bring on a business upset that would do more harm than possibly could take place if gold were let alone. Tampering with gold caused the distress in the first place but swallowing a few of the dog's hairs won't heal the bite.

Strikes and Taxes.

On the business side the news was rather sketchy. Strikes in the steel industry continued to be an upsetting factor and were responsible for a drop this week, according to the American Iron & Steel Institute, of 15 per cent in the operating rate. Mills will run on an operating basis of 77.4 per cent of capacity, the lowest since the end of last December. A sharp rebound no doubt will take place, once the strikes are settled, but strikes are an economic loss.

President Roosevelt's tax message came after the character of the day's markets was well developed, and in any event it was bound to have a mixed reception. It tended to hurt Government bonds and to help stocks, in so far as it repeated the President's view that no new taxes are now needed, but it indicated an attack on certain industries, notably mining and oil, and revealed: (1) Either rising anxiety of Government over the insufficiency of tax receipts, or (2) a fresh onslaught against individuals with lots of money.

George F. Baker.

Seldom has the passing of a prominent Wall Street man caused so much genuine regret as that felt by the friends and acquaintances of George F. Baker. The time has nevertheless passed when the death of a rich man, supposedly holding large amounts of securities, gives the markets a turn. Estates nowadays are usually in such shape that no sudden pressure on the markets result, nor as a rule does any early change in corporation management take place. It is generally supposed that a good deal of American Telephone stock was sold after the death of the elder George F. Baker, for he was the second largest holder and the stock can absorb a good deal of liquidation. Some of the stocks with which the name of the elder George F. Baker was associated, in addition to Telephone, were National Biscuit, American Can, New York Central, Lackawanna, Lehigh Valley, Shattuck, Montgomery Ward and United States Steel.

Steel Operations Slump to 77.4%

New York, June 1 (AP).—The sharpest decline in the Nation's steel operations in many months was reported today by the American Iron & Steel Institute in the wake of the tieup of strike-bound plants of some independent producers in the Cleveland, Youngstown and Chicago districts.

The operating rate this week, the Institute estimated will be 77.4 per cent of capacity compared with 91 per cent last week.

N. J. Standard Names Farish New President

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 1.—Walter C. Teagle, since 1917 president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, told stockholders at the annual meeting of the company today that, effective immediately, he would assume the chairmanship of the board. He will be succeeded as president by W. S. Farish, former chairman.

Teagle, who is 59, said he wished to be relieved of his present duties in order to have more time for special work. Reviewing his incumbency in office, Teagle told stockholders that the year preceding his election to the presidency the company's interests had produced 9,658,000 barrels of crude oil, while in 1936 the output was 206,356,000 barrels.

Organizer of Humble Oil.

The new president, who is 56 years old, was one of the organizers of Humble Oil Co., now controlled by Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, and was long its president. He has been a director of the New Jersey company for several years as well as chairman of the board. He is a native of Mayersville, Miss., and a graduate of the University of Mississippi in the class of 1900.

Teagle comes of a family long connected with the oil business. His maternal grandfather, Morris Clark, was a partner of John D. Rockefeller before the formation of Standard Oil, and his father, John Teagle, was likewise prominent in the industry. In 1917 he succeeded A. C. Bedford as president of the New Jersey company.

"Mayor Kelly, five men were killed. Who gave the order?"

The Canton Chamber of Commerce announced it was conducting a mail poll on the question of "strike or work?" Frank A. Hardesty, subregional director of the S. W. O. C., described the poll as a "rotten deal."

At Buffalo Republic officials handed 20 affidavits to police and charged again that C. I. O. pickets had tried to intimidate loyal workers at the South Buffalo plant.

Meanwhile, John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., charged the Republic Steel Corporation and Chicago police with "planned murder," and called for action by Federal and State authorities.

His charge was countered by Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, who said "these men died because they followed the methods and procedure laid down by Lewis."

A statement by Republic Steel asserted "the mob consisted overwhelmingly of imported pickets and out-of-State agitators and Communists."

U. A. W. Starts "Rent Strike."

Pontiac, Mich., June 1 (AP).—A "rent strike" directed by a United Automobile Workers committee began here today, while a Detroit member of the union disclosed tentative plans for similar action there July 1.

Mort J. Furay, who said in Detroit he had been designated to head a "committee for organization of renters and consumers," said 48 families there already had refused to pay $5 monthly rent increases.

Dearborn Officials Subpenaed.

Detroit, June 1 (AP).—Officials of suburban Dearborn, where United Automobile Workers officials were beaten and chased away from gates of the Ford Motor Co. last Wednesday, were subpenaed tonight to testify before a Wayne County grand jury.

Duncan C. McCrea, prosecutor, who said "impartial witnesses" had given evidence of "unprovoked assault by Ford men," issued summons for Mayor John L. Carey and Police Chief Carl A. Brooks, of Dearborn, to testify before a comman pleas court grand jury.

After the riot, in which 18 persons were injured, McCrea asked Carey to "bring to this office all of the parties involved," and requested that Harry H. Bennett, Ford personnel director, produce any company employes who appeared in newspaper photographs of the fighting. When no answer was received from either Carey or Bennett, the prosecutor moved to bring the case to the attention of the grand jury.

Bennett said no members of the Ford service department, which polices the huge industrial unit where 89,300 men are employed, participated in the fighting.

Film Union Dispute Ends.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Calif., June 1.—The month-old film strike, so far as the inter-union squabble aspect is concerned, ended today, it was announced by George E. Browne, international president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, and other conferees.

"The studio situation reached an amicable solution yesterday," the statement read. "Conditions laid down by myself, as president of the I. A. T. S. E., having been met, the striking painters return to work immediately.

"They are admitted to the studio-union basic agreement reached at New York early in April, under closed shop conditions and with a 10 per cent salary increase."

Arms in Republic Plants.

Cleveland, June 1 (AP).—Tom M. Girdler, chairman of Republic Steel Corporation, tonight told his first press conference since the steel strike started that Republic's strike-bound plants contained arms and ammunition.

Girdler insisted Republic would continue to refuse to sign the collective bargaining agreement contract offered by the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Nye's Neutrality Plan Is Considered

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau declared the tripartite monetary agreement between this country, Britain and France "is working beautifully" to steady foreign exchange values in the face of the war crisis.

Discussing his resolution in advance of his appearance before the Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Nye said yesterday:

"I believe the time has come to act and shall urge the adoption of my resolution to that end."

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, who has been active as a member of the bloc favoring mandatory embargo legislation, joined in the belief the neutrality act should be applied to Germany and possibly Italy.

Senate Votes Bee Bill.

The Senate Passed yesterday and sent to the House a bill to authorize producers of honey bees to enter into marketing agreements with the Secretary of Agriculture.

D. C. Astronomer Makes Discovery

Important new features in the spectrum of the giant star Betelgeuse have been detected by Director Walter S. Adams at the Mount Wilson Observatory of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, it was announced here yesterday.

A powerful spectograph attached to the 100-inch telescope shows that many of the dark spectral lines produced by absorption of light in passing through the star's atmosphere appear double. A narrow bright line at the middle of the relatively wide absorption line causes the apparent doubling, which occurs only when the number of atoms along the path traversed by the star's light is very great.

In most stars the conditions for this reversal of intensity are generally unfavorable, and its widespread appearance in Betelguese indicates that much of its light must come from a great depth within the star. The conclsion harmonizes with the well-established fact that the density of the great red giant stars is only about a thousandth part of air.

D. C. Association Wins Second Prize

The second prize in a national contest of State tuberculosis associations for the most attractive Chrismas Seals publicity was awarded yesterday to the District Tuberculosis Association. Minnesota won first place, Wisconsin third and Texas fourth.

Scrapbooks containing all of the news and pictured publicity obtained in connection with the 1936 annual Christmas Seals sale by the winning associations are now on exhibition in Milwaukee at the annual convention of the National Tuberculosis Association and its more than 2,000 affiliate organizations. Honorable mention was given to Oregon, Virginia and Arkansas.

Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, managing director of the District association who is attending the convention, was congratulated by the judges of the contest and by Miss Elizabeth Cole, acting publicity director of the national association.

To the eye, and in essential details, the British Lounge Tropi-tex looks exactly like a fine year 'round suit. The vital difference is that Tropi-tex is remarkably light in weight and extremely cool. A pure Worsted just like the fabrics used in your regular clothing, except that it is very thin and of an open, porous construction. This fabric is unusually shape-retaining and hence wrinkles less and holds a crease longer . . . actually ironing itself out as it hangs in the closet overnight.
